Highly skilled workers in the construction industry are in short supply. The construction industry is facing a shortage of skilled workers, and this is a problem that is not going to be solved by simply training more workers. The industry needs to attract more workers, and this can be done by making the industry more attractive. One way to do this is by improving the working conditions of the industry. Another way is by offering higher wages. The industry also needs to invest in training and education for its workers. This will help to ensure that the industry has a steady supply of skilled workers in the future.
