Morocco Edith Wharton:

In Morocco Edith Wharton, 2016-08-12 Having begun my book with the statement that Morocco still lacks a guide book I should have wished to take a first step toward remedying that deficiency But the conditions in which I travelled though full of unexpected and picturesque opportunities were not suited to leisurely study of the places visited The time was limited by the approach of the rainy season which puts an end to motoring over the treacherous trails of the Spanish zone In 1918 owing to the watchfulness of German submarines in the Straits and along the northwest coast of Africa the trip by sea from Marseilles to Casablanca ordinarily so easy was not to be made without much discomfort and loss of time Once on board the steamer passengers were often kept in port without leave to land for six or eight days therefore for any one bound by a time limit as most war workers were it was necessary to travel Pg viii across country and to be back at Tangier before the November rains This left me only one month in which to visit Morocco from the Mediterranean to the High Atlas and from the Atlantic to Fez and even had there been a Djinn s carpet to carry me the multiplicity of impressions received would have made precise observation difficult The next best thing to a Djinn s carpet a military motor was at my disposal every morning but war conditions imposed restrictions and the wish to use the minimum of petrol often stood in the way of the second visit which alone makes it possible to carry away a definite and detailed impression In Morocco by Edith Wharton Edith

Edith Wharton in Morocco Genêt Cunningham, 1997. In Morocco (1920). By: Edith Wharton Edith Wharton, 2017-10-06. Edith Wharton, born Edith Newbold Jones, January 24, 1862, August 11, 1937, was an American novelist, short story writer, and designer. Wharton combined an insider's view of American aristocracy with a powerful prose style. Her novels and short stories realistically portrayed the lives and morals of the late nineteenth century, an era of decline and faded wealth. She won the Pulitzer Prize for Literature in 1921 and was the first woman to receive this honor. Wharton was acquainted with many of the well-known people of her day, both in America and in Europe, including President Theodore Roosevelt. Edith Wharton was born Edith Newbold Jones to George Frederic Jones and Lucretia Stevens Rhinelanders at their

brownstone at 14 West Twenty third Street in New York City She had two older brothers Frederic Rhinelander who was sixteen and Henry Edward who was eleven She was baptized April 20 1862 Easter Sunday at Grace Church To her friends and family she was known as Pussy Jones The saying keeping up with the Joneses is said to refer to her father s family She was also related to the Rensselaers the most prestigious of the old patroon families who had received land grants from the former Dutch government of New York and New Jersey She had a lifelong friendship with her niece the landscape architect Beatrix Farrand of Reef Point in Bar Harbor Maine Wharton was born during the Civil War she was three years old when the Confederate States surrendered After the war the family traveled extensively in Europe From 1866 to 1872 the Jones family visited France Italy Germany and Spain During her travels the young Edith became fluent in French German and Italian At the age of ten she suffered from typhoid fever while the family was at a spa in the Black Forest After the family returned to the United States in 1872 they spent their winters in New York and their summers in Newport Rhode Island While in Europe she was educated by tutors and governesses She rejected the standards of fashion and etiquette that were expected of young girls at the time which were intended to allow women to marry well and to be put on display at balls and parties She considered these fashions superficial and oppressive Edith wanted more education than she received so she read from her father s library and from the libraries of her father s friends Her mother forbade her to read novels until she was married and Edith obeyed this command Wharton began writing poetry and fiction as a young girl and attempted to write her first novel at age eleven At age 15 her first published work appeared a translation of a German poem Was die Steine Erz hlen What the Stones Tell by Heinrich Karl Brugsch for which which she was paid 50 Her family did not want her name to appear in print since writing was not considered a proper occupation for a society woman of her time Consequently the poem was published under the name of a friend s father E A Washburn a cousin of Ralph Waldo Emerson who supported women s education He played a pivotal role in Edith s efforts to educate herself and encouraged her ambition to write professionally In 1877 at the age of 15 she secretly wrote a 30 000 word novella Fast and Loose In 1878 her father arranged for a collection of two dozen original poems and five translations Verses to be privately published In 1880 she had five poems published anonymously in the Atlantic Monthly an important literary magazine Despite these early successes she was not encouraged by her family or her social circle and though she continued to write she did not publish anything more until her poem The Last Giustiniani was published in Scribner s Magazine in October 1889 On 29 April 1885 at age 23 she married Edward Teddy Robbins Wharton who was 12 years her senior at the Trinity Chapel Complex

In Morocco Part 2 Edith Wharton, 2025-06-25 Part 2 begins with the dazzling allure of Marrakech and transitions into an intimate exploration of harems ceremonial life and French infrastructural reforms under General Lyautey Wharton praises the protectorate s modernization efforts while also tracing the historical contours of Moroccan sovereignty She devotes space to analyzing Moroccan architecture revealing its symbolic depth and aesthetic unity This section moves beyond travelogue into cultural critique and historical reflection Her thoughtful prose highlights Morocco's complexity, elegance, and evolving identity. In Morocco Part 1 Edith Wharton, 2025-06-25 Part 1 chronicles Wharton's early impressions of Morocco as she travels through Rabat, Salé, Volubilis, Meknes, and Fez. She vividly captures the contrast between Islamic heritage and French administrative presence in the cities. In Fez, detailed observations of local crafts, markets, and women's lives reveal a deep curiosity about Moroccan daily rhythms. Through ruins and rituals, Wharton uncovers the tension between tradition and transformation. This section lays a lyrical foundation for her cultural and emotional engagement with Morocco.

In Morocco Edith Wharton, 2020-12-03 To step on board a steamer in a Spanish port and three hours later to land in a country without a guide book is a sensation to rouse the hunger of the repletest sight-seer. The sensation is attainable by any one who will take the trouble to row out into the harbour of Algeciras and scramble onto a little black boat headed across the straits. Hardly has the rock of Gibraltar turned to cloud when one's foot is on the soil of an almost unknown Africa. Tangier indeed is in the guide books but cuckoo-like it has had to lay its eggs in strange nests and the traveller who wants to find out about it must acquire a work dealing with some other country, Spain or Portugal or Algeria. There is no guidebook to Morocco and no way of knowing once one has left Tangier behind where the long trail over the Rif is going to land one in the sense understood by any one accustomed to European certainties. The air of the unforeseen blows on one from the roadless passes of the Atlas.

In Morocco Edith Wharton, 2018-04-07 THE publication of In Morocco by Mrs Wharton is practically simultaneous with that of her most recent novel The Age of Innocence. Both of these books add security to their author's position as one of the foremost contemporary writers of English prose. The one reveals her at her best as a constructive novelist; the other proves once more her exceptional power in translating color, line, and form into the perfect verbal equivalents. We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection. Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public. The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature, and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades. The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works. To ensure a high quality product, each title has been meticulously hand-curated by our staff. Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience The Representation of Moroccan Otherness in Edith Wharton's In Morocco Khadija Belhiah,2012 Discursive and Cultural Encounters Sadik Rddad,2002
