In the 2010s Detroit government officials classified a staggering 150 000 lots more than a third of the city as vacant or abandoned. Analyzing subsequent efforts to shrink the Motor City's footprint and budget, Safransky presents a new way of conceptualizing urban abandonment. She challenges popular myths that cast Detroit as empty, along with narratives that reduce its historical decline to capital and white flight. In connecting contemporary debates over neoliberal urbanism to Cold War histories and the lasting political legacies of global movements for decolonization and Black liberation, she foregrounds how the making of and challenges to modern property regimes have shaped urban policy and politics. Drawing on critical geographical theory and community-based ethnography, Safransky shows how private property functions as a racialized construct, an ideology and a moral force that shapes selves and worlds. By thinking the city after property, Safransky illuminates alternative ways of imagining and organizing urban life. The Werewolf of Grosse Pointe & Other Stories Gundella, 1976 Through Normandy Katharine Sarah Macquoid, 1874 The Life Treasury of American Folklore, 1961 A collection of more than 150 stories, legends, and sayings, and is designed to be a book of reference with a glossary of people, places, and events in American folklore. A Treasury of American Folklore Terri Hardin, 1994 A look into American folklore.
