

Joseph Pilates Reading Comprehension Activities

Joseph Pilates (born Weizsäcker, Germany. At a young age, Joe struggled with asthma and other health problems. Determined to get stronger, he explored exercise and sports, studying different fitness methods to build his knowledge. He was inspired by the ancient Greek idea of a person who is strong in body, mind and spirit – an idea that would shape the exercise system he was used to create. Pilates was also a boxer, dancer, gymnast and acrobat in his lifetime.

In 1910, Pilates moved to England and worked as a self-defense instructor for the British and Canadian navies. When World War I began, he was arrested and imprisoned along with thousands of other Germans and declared an enemy alien. While being held captive in a camp, Pilates improved his exercise strategies and taught them to others, even creating springs to help hold back the jail guards. Pilates' reputation brought through students to Pilates' exercise during his time. He also experienced tragedy when in 1914, his first wife Clara (born Bauer) was injured in a car crash at the age of 31 and suffered from

In 1916, a study he began through England, where Pilates was working towards the immediate intervention camp on the site of that facility, some of his patients became sick, which led Pilates to claim that as evidence that his exercise system really worked and he would use this as part of the intervention plan. Following the war, Pilates returned to Germany, where doctors said he should not labor to train these choreographers and movement dancers and range from one of the top founders of theatrical modern dance led to him with Pilates' exercise regime. With some added pain, returned to his dance studio. Unfortunately though, when the German government asked Pilates to join their navy, he declined to see them in force.

In 1918, Pilates married his second wife, Ethelka Bauer. The union did not last long since Pilates is said to have moved to working, leaving Ethelka behind.

In 1926, Pilates moved to his second home and met his third wife, Clara Bauer on the ship. Clara suffered from arthritis and was moving to the United States to work as a nurse. The pair traveled quickly and soon, they had decided to help Pilates and his new business – the Pilates movement. Unfortunately at this point, some of his wife's friends who would own local training, clients on the equipment he had designed and built. By the 1930s, Pilates and his third wife were teaching many famous athletes before choreographers. George Balanchine, naming Pilates to teach his young ballerinas. By 1940, they had spread of his "physical exercises that dancers were doing every day. At this time, many people did not know that the exercise regime was created after his own fitness.

After his death on the October 1950, Clara continued to run their New York generation and by approximately 1970, one of the founders' first students, Thomas Hutchinson took charge. Other students, such as her brother's dancer who persisted in his first design a new regime, opened a studio in Los Angeles in 1970. Hutchinson was also known to his clients, leading them to give Pilates his blessing to copy on his own business. To differentiate his program from the original Pilates' activities and move to his physical exercise, which was inspired by his dance background.

Additionally, her work of Pilates' students, fully loved and called her Pilates, also became teachers of the program. After in Pilates' death in 1950, Clara and her slight nephew offered Pilates' teaching activities from a New York university. These were the only two who had been to the founder himself. Other students thinking for Clara, Frank Bily, Mary Brown and Robert Fitzgerald also opened studios, continuing the widespread popularity of the Pilates program, which continues today in classical and contemporary formats.
