Narrative of William W. Brown, a Fugitive Slave: Written by Himself William Wells Brown,2012-03-01 I WAS born in Lexington Ky The man who stole me as soon as I was born recorded the births of all the infants which he claimed to be born his property in a book which he kept for that purpose My mother s name was Elizabeth She had seven children viz Solomon Leander Benjamin Joseph Millford Elizabeth and myself No two of us were children of the same father My father s name as I learned from my mother was George Higgins He was a white man a relative of my master and connected with some of the first families in Kentucky My master owned about forty slaves twenty five of whom were field hands He removed from Kentucky to Missouri when I was quite young and settled thirty or forty miles above St Charles on the Missouri where in addition to his practice as a physician he carried on milling merchandizing and farming He had a large farm the principal productions of which were tobacco and hemp The slave cabins were situated on the back part of the farm with the house of the overseer whose name was Grove Cook in their midst He had the entire charge of the farm and having no family was allowed a woman to keep house for him whose business it was to deal out the provisions for the hands A woman was also kept at the quarters to do the cooking for the field hands who were summoned to their unrequited toil every morning at four o clock by the ringing of a bell hung on a post near the house of the overseer They were allowed half an hour to eat their breakfast and get to the field At half past four a horn was blown by the overseer which was the signal to commence work and every one that was not on the spot at the time had to receive ten lashes from the negro whip with which the overseer always went armed The handle was about three feet long with the butt end filled with lead and the lash six or seven feet in length made of cowhide with platted wire on the end of it This whip was put in requisition very frequently and freely and a small offence on the part of a slave furnished an occasion for its use During the time that Mr Cook was overseer I was a house servant a situation preferable to that of a field hand as I was better fed better clothed and not obliged to rise at the ringing of the bell but about half an hour after I have often laid and heard the crack of the whip and the screams of the slave My mother was a field hand and one morning was ten or fifteen minutes behind the others in getting into the field As soon as she reached the spot where they were at work the overseer commenced whipping her She cried Oh pray Oh pray Oh pray these are generally the words of slaves when imploring mercy at the hands of their oppressors I heard her voice and knew it and jumped out of my bunk and went to the door Though the field was some distance from the house I could hear every crack of the whip and every groan and cry of my poor mother I remained at the door not daring to venture any farther The cold chills ran over me and I wept aloud After giving her ten lashes the sound of the whip ceased and I returned to my bed and found no consolation but in my tears It was not yet

Brown, an American Slave* William W. Brown,2015-11-26 This is a slave narrative written in the mid 19th century before the Civil War From the preface THE present Narrative was first published in Boston U S in July 1847 and eight thousand copies were sold in less than eighteen months from the time of its publication This rapid sale may be attributed to the circumstance that for three years preceding its publication I had been employed as a lecturing agent by the American Anti slavery Society and I was thus very generally known throughout the Free States of the Great Republic as one who had spent the first twenty years of his life as a slave in her southern house of bondage In visiting Great Britain I had two objects in view Firstly I have been chosen as a delegate by the American Peace Committee for a Congress of Nations to attend the Peace Convention to be held in Paris during the last week of the present month August 1849 Many of the most distinguished American Abolitionists considered it a triumphant evidence of the progress of their principles that one of the oppressed coloured race one who is even now by the constitution of the United States a slave should have been selected for this honourable office and were therefore very desirous that I should attend Secondly I wished to follow up the work of my friends and fellow labourers Charles Lenox Remond and Frederick Douglass and to lay before the people of Great Britain and Ireland the wrongs that are still committed upon the slaves and the free coloured people of America The rapid increase of communication between the two sides of the Atlantic has brought them so close together that the personal intercourse between the British people and American slaveowners is now very great and the slaveholder crafty and politic as deliberate tyrants generally are rarely leaves the shores of Europe without attempting at least to assuage the prevalent hostility against his beloved peculiar institution    [Narrative of William W.
