The Phenomenon of Static Electricity

Electric charge is a fundamental property of matter that gives a substance its tendency to attract or repel other substances. The state of electric charge is called polarization. The amount of polarization of a substance depends on its material and its environment. When charges are released from a polarized substance, they move toward a charged object, creating an attraction or repulsion. When charges are released from a neutral substance, they move away from the charged object, creating a repulsion.

Understanding Static Electricity

Electric charge is a property of matter that gives the substance its tendency to attract or repel other substances. The amount of polarization of a substance depends on its material and its environment. When charges are released from a polarized substance, they move toward a charged object, creating an attraction or repulsion. When charges are released from a neutral substance, they move away from the charged object, creating a repulsion.

1. Definition of Charge: Electric charge is a property,赋予 to every electric particle, that causes electric charge to attract or repel other electric charges, approximately 10⁻¹⁹ coulombs.
2. Attraction of Charges: The most basic property of charge is the opposite sign of the electrical charges. Opposite charges attract each other, while charges of the same sign repel each other.
3. Neutralization: The basic balance of charged electrons allows progression in the attraction of their charges and movement progression to the source of the charge. Neutralization is the process of an object with a net charge of zero. When it is in the basic balance of positive and negative, it is the charged particle in the negative, neutralized charges.

Repulsion of Opposite Charges

1. Definition: Opposite charges repel through electrostatic forces, leading to attraction of the opposite charges and repulsion. This is caused by electrons being pulled away from the positive charges.
2. Like Charges: Two like charges repel each other, creating a repulsion.
3. Neutral Charges: Two like charges repel each other, creating a repulsion.
