After the election, the Journal had to choose which news stories to emphasize. Stories about the new president were given more attention, while stories of local news, politics, and culture were left out. This reflected the general concern that citizens were more interested in the new president than in local news.

These applications implement these constraints, guaranteeing that each connection point maintains its own hierarchical hierarchy rule. The user interface provides a point-and-click interface that allows to map a connection point to the relevant corresponding node connection. Double clicking on the connection point or the point in the application's tree map view highlights the connection and the corresponding application (or a subtree) which the connection point corresponds to. All these features are designed to support the application's need for a visual interface for the connection point management.
