The Palgrave Handbook of Arctic Policy and Politics Ken S. Coates, Carin Holroyd, 2019-11-14 The Arctic has for some forty years been among the most innovative policy environments in the world. The region has developed impressive systems for intra regional cooperation responded to the challenges of the rapid environmental change empowered and engaged with Indigenous peoples and dealt with the multiple challenges of natural resource development. The Palgrave Handbook on Arctic Policy and Politics has drawn on scholars from many countries and academic disciplines to focus on the central theme of Arctic policy innovation. The portrait that emerges from these chapters is of a complex fluid policy environment shaped by internal national and global dynamics and by a wide range of political legal economic and social transitions. The Arctic is a complex place from a political perspective and is on the verge of becoming even more so. Effective proactive and forward looking policy innovation will be required if the Far North is to be able to address its challenges and capitalize on its opportunities.

Work Zone Speed Management John W. Shaw, Madhav V. Chitturi, William Bremer, David Alan Noyce, 2015 This synthesis documents information regarding the current state of practice for work zone speed management. The report compiles data, procedures, techniques and technical issues related to observing and comparing work zone speeds. The speed management measures have been organized into four categories: engineering, operational enforcement, and public education and outreach. Information included in this study was acquired through a review of the literature, two surveys of state department of transportation representatives in all states, a compilation of state agency public information campaigns and follow up interviews with select survey respondents from several U.S. states and one Canadian province.

The End of Driving Bern Grush, John Niles, 2018-06-25 While many transportation and city planners, researchers, students, practitioners, and political leaders are familiar with the technical nature and promise of vehicle automation, consensus is not yet often seen on the impact that will result or the policies and actions that those responsible for transportation systems should take. The End of Driving: Transportation Systems and Public Policy Planning for Autonomous Vehicles explores both the potential of vehicle automation technology and the barriers it faces when considering coherent urban deployment. The book evaluates the case for deliberate development of automated public transportation and mobility as a service as paths towards sustainable mobility, describing critical approaches to the planning and management of vehicle automation technology. It serves as a reference for understanding the full life cycle of the multi year transportation systems planning processes, including novel regulation planning and acquisition tools for regional transportation. Application oriented research based and solution oriented rather than predict and warn. The End of Driving concludes with a detailed discussion of the systems design needed for accomplishing this shift. From the Foreword by Susan Shaheen, The authors extend potential solutions through a set of open ended exercises after each chapter. Their approach is both strategic and deliberate. They lead the reader from definitions and context setting to the transition toward automation employing a range of creative strategies and policies. While our quest to understand how to deploy automated vehicles is just beginning, this book provides a thoughtful introduction to inform this evolution. Offers a workable public transit solution design melding the traditional acquire and operate mode with the absorption of new technology. Provides a step by step discussion of digital systems designs and effective regulation by data approaches needed for a new urban mobility. Learning aids include case study scenarios, chapter objectives and discussion questions, sidebars and a glossary.
