Following the Balibo massacre's whale

Shooting Balibo: Blood and Memory in East Timor by Tony Maniaty. Sydney: Viking, 2009, 320 pp. ISBN 9780670073580

EARLY on in Tony Maniaty's Shooting Balibo we come across Herman Melville, Michelangelo Antonioni and John Dos Passos. We quickly get the message that this is as much a journey of the imagination as it is a travelogue, memoir or investigation. Maniaty tells us that when he went to East Timor as an ABC reporter in 1975, just before the ill-fated journalists, his travel reading was Melville's Moby Dick. Here we get a sense of the young journalist's ambition, his questing commitment to follow the story, just as Ahab follows his whale.

But in retrospect it also tells us how large the 1975 events at Balibo have figured in Maniaty's life. Shooting Balibo narrates his recent return to Timor, as an advisor to Robert Connolly's film Balibo and marks the first time he has returned to the tiny island nation since he fled just before the Indonesian invasion in 1975. In a sense, the book is still about him following the whale.

Over the years Maniaty has worked as a journalist, a novelist and a filmmaker and is now an academic. In many ways this book seems like the one that he was destined to write: a memoir with a journalistic eye,

Colonial Policing and the Transnational Legacy Conor O'Reilly, 2017-08-15 This compilation represents the first study to examine the historical evolution and shifting global dynamics of policing across the Lusophone community. With contributions from a multi disciplinary range of experts it traces the role of policing within and across settings that are connected by the shared legacy of Portuguese colonialism. Previously neglected within studies of the globalisation of policing the Lusophone experience brings novel insights to established analyses of colonial post colonial and transnational policing. This compilation draws research attention to the policing peculiarities of the Lusophone community. It proposes new cultural settings within which to test dominant theories of policing research. It uncovers an important piece of the jigsaw that is policing across the globe. Key research questions that it addresses include: What were the patterns of policing and policing transfers across Portuguese colonial settings? How did Portugal's dual status as both fascist regime and imperial power shape its late colonial policing? What have been the different experiences of post colonial and transitional policing across the former Portuguese colonies? In what ways are Lusophone nations contributing to and indeed shaping patterns of transnational policing? What comparative lessons can be drawn from the Lusophone policing experience?
