Haftka,1973 A pilot computer program was developed for the design of minimum mass wing structures under flutter strength and minimum gage constraints The wing structure is idealized by finite elements and second order piston theory aerodynamics is used in the flutter calculation Mathematical programing methods are used for the optimization Computation times during the design process are reduced by three techniques First iterative analysis methods used to reduce significantly reanalysis times Second the number of design variables is kept small by not using a one to one correspondence between finite elements and design variables Third a technique for using approximate second derivatives with Newton s method for the optimization is incorporated The program output is compared with previous published results It is found that some flutter characteristics such as the flutter speed can display discontinous dependence on the design variables which are the thicknesses of the structural elements It is concluded that it is undesirable to use such quantities in the formulation of the flutter constraint    Index Aeronauticus ,1967    Whitaker's Cumulative Book List ,1985    Engineering Compendium on Radiation Shielding R.G.
