Subramaniam, 2014-07-24 This book explores effective approaches for communicating science to the public in developing countries. Offering multiple perspectives on this important topic it features 17 chapters that represent the efforts of 23 authors from eight countries Australia, Bangladesh, India, Ireland, New Zealand, USA, Singapore and South Africa. Inside readers will find a diversity of approaches to communicate science to the public. The book also highlights some of the challenges that science communicators, science policy makers, science teachers, university academics in the sciences and even entrepreneurs may face in their attempts to boost science literacy levels in their countries. In addition it shares several best practices from the developed world that may help readers create communication initiatives that can lead to increased engagement with science in communities in the Asia Pacific region and beyond. Given the pervasive influence of science and technology in today's society their impact will only increase in the years to come as the world becomes more globalized and the economies of countries become more inter linked. This book will be a useful source of reference for developing countries looking to tap into the potential of science for nation building and effectively engage their communities to better understand science and technology.
