Justice of the Peace and Local Government Review, 1869 Justice of the Peace, 1869 Electronic Calculators
Robert Briggs, 1984 Accountancy, 1987 Comprehensive Income Taxation and Rate Reduction Joseph A.
Pechman, 1983 Like Nobody's Business Andrew C. Comrie, 2021-02-23 How do university finances really work From flagship public research universities to small private liberal arts colleges there are few aspects of these institutions associated with more confusion myths or lack of understanding than how they fund themselves and function in the business of higher education Using simple approachable explanations supported by clear illustrations this book takes the reader on an engaging and enlightening tour of how the money flows How does the university really pay for itself Why do tuition and fees rise so fast Why do universities lose money on research Do most donations go to athletics Grounded in hard data original analyses and the practical experience of a seasoned administrator this book provides refreshingly clear answers and comprehensive insights for anyone on or off campus who is interested in the business of the university how it earns its money how it spends it and how it all works The Earned Income Tax Credit and the Labor Supply of Married Couples Nada Eissa, Hilary Williamson Hoynes, 1998 Over 18 million taxpayers are projected to receive the Earned Income Tax Credit EITC in tax year 1997 at a total cost to the federal government of about 25 billion dollars The EITC is refundable so that any amount of the credit exceeding the family's tax liability is returned in the form of a cash refund Advocates of the credit argue that this redistribution occurs with much less distortion to labor supply than that caused by other elements of the welfare system This popular view that the credit is unlikely to hold among married couples Theory suggests that primary earners typically men would increase labor force participation but secondary earners would reduce their labor supply in response to an EITC We study the labor supply response of married couples to several EITC expansions between 1984 and 1996 While our primary interest is the response to changes in the budget set induced by the EITC our estimation strategy takes account of budget set changes caused by federal tax policy and by cross sectional variation in wages income and family size We use both quasi experimental and reduced form labor supply models to estimate the impact of EITC induced tax changes The results suggest that EITC expansions between 1984 and 1996 increased married men's labor force participation only slightly but reduced married women's labor force participation by over a full percentage point Overall the evidence suggests that family labor supply and pre tax family earnings fell among married couples Our results imply that the EITC is effectively subsidizing married mothers to stay at home and therefore have implications for the design of the program Guide to the
