Merger Policy In The E Conomy:

Merger Policy in the E-conomy Andreas Seip, 2003-11-10 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2002 in the subject Law Civil Private Trade Anti Trust Law Business Law grade First Class University of Strathclyde Strathclyde Business School Law School course Strathclyde Business School language English abstract This paper addresses the economic policy context surrounding the European merger regulation in high tech industries The rapidity of technological change raises questions as to the operation of the dynamic parameters underlying high tech industries While the identification of those parameters appears to be straightforward the interpretation of the effects posed by the dynamics is rather controversial On the one hand it is argued that the very dynamics of high tech industries create or strengthen dominant companies whereby consumers run the risk of adopting inefficient technologies However the present paper is to contest this reasoning since performance competition and the resultant Schumpeterian process of disequilibria makes a so called lock in unlikely The second chapter is to identify the distinctive parameters of hightech industries whereby a contrasting analysis between the two dimensions of economic performance establishes dynamic competition as best utilised to serve the furtherance of consumer welfare The third chapter is to consider the implications of dynamic competition for current relevant market definition by discussing the deficiencies of current practice Recent competitive developments appear to confirm a broad intermarket and technologies based competition among firms The fourth chapter therefore seeks to propose analytical tools that are capable of evaluating the state of competition more accurately To that end the cornerstones of relevant market definition are redefined by including a performance based test an enquiry into capability explanations and the setting of time frames to assess entry competition The final chapter is to conclude that although Schumpeterian dynamic competition deals with the expectation of innovation the proposed analysis is the more accurate approach to intermarket competition The goal of this paper is to provide a pragmatic framework that assists merger analysis in evaluating the ongoing transformation of industrial organisation in the high tech environment

The EU in the Global Political Economy Finn Laursen, 2009 The EU has become an important international actor Its internal policies often have repercussions far beyond its borders It is also increasingly becoming a proactive global actor defending its interests and projecting its norms and values in both bilateral and multilateral external relations This volume has a special focus on external economic relations and includes chapters on the Euro trade policy and competition policy as well as on specific bilateral relationships The section on relations with industrialized countries deals with the United States Canada Russia Japan and China while the section on relations with developing countries has chapters on administrative reform environmental cooperation Cuba Central America and Iran The book thus gives an up to date overview of important aspects of the EU s external relations With a focus on political economy it traces the continuous interplay of economics and politics that has characterized the EU s development of a fully fledged foreign policy What emerges is a picture of a European Union that is better equipped institutionally to deal with economic rather than political issues Takeovers, Mergers and the Regional Economy Brian Ashcroft, James H. Love, 1993 The controversial bids for Distillers Rowntree and Scottish Newcastle in the 1980s sparked off public debate over the policy surrounding takeovers and mergers and this challenging new study examines the profound implications such acquisitions may have on a regional economy It shows that there are often systematic forces at work in the external takeover of and by regional companies and that the process itself has quantifiable effects on both the companies concerned and on regional growth and development as a whole Using the Scotch whisky industry as a study the book concludes that the policy issues involved are much wider than competition policy has thus far allowed for It is a must for graduates and professionals alike BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved *105-2 Hearing: Mergers and Corporate Consolidation in the New Economy, S.
