Metacognition And Cognitive Neuropsychology Monitoring And Control Processes:

Metacognition and Cognitive Neuropsychology Giuliana Mazzoni, Thomas O. Nelson, 2014-05-12 Control processes are those mental functions that allow us to initiate, monitor and prioritize mental activities. They are crucial to normal mental functioning. A better understanding of the nature of control processes and their deficits is important for clinical work and for an adequate theory of consciousness. Previously, control processes have been examined within the frameworks of two parallel but independent paradigms: those of cognitive psychology and of neuropsychology. Cognitive psychologists have stressed the theoretical and empirical nature of normal, unimpaired control processes; neuropsychologists have focused on the relationships between damage to specific functional areas of the brain and deficits in specific control processes. Both have contributed extensively to our understanding of control processes. However, they have tended to operate independently, with little if any cross talk between disciplines, despite the potential benefits such dialogue is likely to generate. This book represents the first attempt to synthesize cognitive and neuropsychological perspectives on control processes. It contains state-of-the-art reports on various aspects of control processes by experts from both disciplines.

Metacognition Patrick Chambres, Marie Izaute, Pierre-Jean Marescaux, 2012-12-06. New Theory and Data on Metacognitive Monitoring and Control in Different Contexts and by Different Individuals. Thomas O. Nelson, University of Mary and USA. This book is divided into several sections, each containing several chapters, and is timely in reporting new theory and data that help refine what is already known about metacognition, defined as people's cognitions about their own cognitions. New data are reported about metacognition during learning, especially judgments of learning that occur soon after studying new items, not only in traditionally examined people such as college students but also in children and in Alzheimer patients. Data are also reported about metacognitive monitoring during the reading of text, not only in college students but also in children. The above situations focus on the acquisition of new items from lists or from texts. However, the book also includes a chapter reporting data about metacognition during problem solving. Besides the chapters on monitoring information in anticipation of future performance, sometimes called prospective monitoring, a chapter is included that offers data about the metacognitive monitoring of the retrieval of information from memory, where the emphasis is on the accuracy of retrospective confidence judgments not only in adults but also in children. This topic is of widespread interest both in traditional domains of cognitive psychology and in applications to domains such as forensics, where eyewitness reports are crucial to judicial decisions. The above topics pertain to aspects of metacognition involving the monitoring of one's own cognitions.

The Cognitive Neuroscience of Metacognition Stephen M. Fleming, Christopher D. Frith, 2014-01-31. Metacognition is the capacity to reflect upon and evaluate cognition and behaviour. Long of interest to philosophers and psychologists, metacognition has recently become the target of research in the cognitive neurosciences. By combining brain imaging, computational modeling, neuropsychology and insights from psychiatry, the present book offers a picture of the metacognitive functions of the brain.

Chapters cover the definition and measurement of metacognition in humans and non human animals the computational underpinnings of metacognitive judgments the cognitive neuroscience of self monitoring ranging from confidence to error monitoring and neuropsychiatric studies of disorders of metacognition This book provides an invaluable overview of a rapidly emerging and important field within cognitive neuroscience Applied Metacognition Timothy J. Perfect, Bennett L.

Schwartz,2002-11-14 There is a growing theoretical and practical interest in the topic of metacognition how we monitor and control our mental processes Applied Metacognition provides a coherent and up to date overview of the relation between theories in metacognition and their application in real world situations As well as a theoretical overview there are substantive chapters covering metacognition in three areas of application metacognition in education metacognition in everyday life memory and metacognition in different populations The book has contributions from many of the leading researchers in metacognition from around the world Handbook of Applied Cognition Francis T. Durso,2007-02-06 Written by a team of leading international researchers under the guidance of Frank Durso the second edition of the Handbook of Applied Cognition brings together the latest research into this challenging and important field and is presented across thirty stimulating and accessible chapters Stewarded by experienced editors from around the globe the handbook has been fully updated with eleven new chapters covering materials that focus on the topics critical to understanding human mental functions in complex environments It is an essential single source reference for researchers cognitive engineers and applied cognitive psychologists as well as advanced students in the flourishing field of applied cognition The Psychology of Learning and Motivation ,2007-10-03 The view of memory use as skilled performance embraces the interactive nature of memory and higher order cognition In considering the contexts in which memory is used this book helps to answer such questions as If asked where I live how do I decide on a street address or city name What influences my selection in a criminal lineup besides actual memory of the perpetrator Why do expert golfers better remember courses they ve played than amateur golfers Chapters in this volume discuss strategies people use in responding to memory queries whether and how to access memory and how to translate retrieved products into responses Coverage includes memory for ongoing events and memory for prospective events how we remember to do future intended actions Individual differences in memory skill is explored across people and situations with special consideration given to the elderly population and how strategies at encoding and retrieval can offset what would otherwise be declining memory An integrative view of memory metamemory judgment and decision making and individual differences Relevant to both applied concerns and basic research Articles

Metacognition is a complex construct which is fundamental to learning Its complex fuzzy and multifaceted nature has often led to its colloquial application in research resulting in studies that fail to identify its theoretical foundation or elements In response to this the research community continues to call for a comprehensive understanding of the construct of metacognition This book is a response to this call for clarity Pina Tarricone provides a theoretical study of the construct of metacognition in terms of psychological theory The first part of the book analyses the relationship between reflection and metacognition and the second part goes on to analyse the construct of metamemory as the foundation of metacognition The third and final part of the book analyses the construct of metacognition to present the final conceptual framework of metacognition and the taxonomy of metacognition This framework builds a picture and a nexus of the construct through visual links to the related concepts that contribute to what is known as metacognition The Taxonomy of Metacognition provides a comprehensive representation and categorisation of all of the terms concepts categories supercategories subcategories and elements of metacognition It clarifies the construct so that researchers and teachers can develop a better understanding of it This important and broad ranging contribution can be applied to many related areas by researchers psychologists teachers and any profession interested in psychological learning processes

For some decades theoretical and empirical research has focused on the phenomenon of metacognition and its overwhelming importance to human learning and performance The real growth in theoretical and empirical studies about metacognition started with the work of Flavell at the end of the 1970s in the context of research on metamemory The metacognitive concept has been very successful stimulating a lot of studies The metacognitive research on reading peaked in the 1980s and has levelled since Metacognition has more recently also been applied to mathematics Metacognition can be differentiated into two central components namely metacognitive knowledge and metacognitive processes or skills In the same vein Brown 1978 distinguished metacognitive knowledge about the interaction between person task and strategies characteristics from the regulation of one's own cognitive activities The purpose of this book is to help to summarise and clarify some of the issues on the conceptualisation the assessment and the training of metacognition on mathematical issues in learners with and without mathematics learning disabilities metacognition in mathematics performance Dual-process Theories in Social Psychology Shelly Chaiken,Yaacov Trope,1999-02-19 This informative volume presents the first comprehensive review of research and theory on dual process models of social information processing These models distinguish between qualitatively different modes of information processing in making decisions and solving problems e g associative versus rule based controlled versus uncontrolled and affective versus cognitive modes Leading contributors review the basic assumptions of these approaches and review the ways they have been applied and tested in such areas as attitudes stereotyping person perception memory and judgment Also examined are the relationships between different sets of processing modes the factors that determine their utilization and how they work in combination to affect responses to social information

Applied Memory Matthew R. Kelley,2009 The goal of the applied memory volume is to highlight many interesting and creative applications of basic memory phenomena that are underrepresented or even unrepresented in the literature Authors were charged with the task of reviewing relevant basic and applied research and offering new empirical investigations into the applications of these benchmark phenomena To this end Applied Memory consists of 17 chapters that explore the influences of generation irrelevant speech verbal overshadowing isolation part set cuing reminiscence hyperremnesia placebos mental state metamemory knowledge flashbulb events and traumatic events on memory in everyday settings as well as applications of source memory social memory involuntary autobiographical memory dream memory and strategic memory regulation The volume is designed as a resource for basic and applied memory researchers and as a supplementary text in graduate or upper level undergraduate courses in cognitive psychology human memory or applied psychology
