Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The laser beam (1) is focused by a lens (2) onto a sample (3). The scattered light is collected by a lens (4) and focused onto a photomultiplier tube (5). The sample is placed on a stage (6) which is mounted on a vibration isolator (7). The laser beam is generated by a laser diode (8) and is focused by a lens (9) onto a beam splitter (10). The beam splitter reflects the laser beam onto a mirror (11) and then onto a lens (12). The lens focuses the laser beam onto the sample. The scattered light is collected by a lens (13) and focused onto a photomultiplier tube (14). The photomultiplier tube is connected to a signal processor (15). The signal processor is connected to a computer (16) which displays the scattered light intensity as a function of time.

DiMarzio, 2024-03-13 This textbook provides an accessible introduction to the fundamentals of geometric and physical optics as they relate to practical problems encountered by engineers and researchers in designing and analyzing optical systems. In this updated edition the author focuses on topics that are critical to understanding how the basic principles of optics affect design decisions. In addition to information on breadboarding experiments and prototypes the new edition also expands its coverage of diffraction and includes numerous complete examples and practical reminders. Professor Charles A. DiMarzio is an associate professor in the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering the Department of Mechanical and Industrial Engineering and the Department of Bioengineering at Northeastern University in Boston Massachusetts. He spent 14 years at Raytheon Company's Electro Optics Systems Laboratory in coherent laser radar for air safety and meteorology. Among other projects there he worked on an airborne laser radar flown on the Galileo II to monitor airflow related to severe storms pollution and wind energy and another laser radar to characterize the wake vortices of landing aircraft. His current research in biomedical optics focuses on microscopy including coherent imaging structured illumination and multi modal imaging. He is also a founding member of Gordon CenSSIS the Gordon Center for Subsurface Sensing and Imaging Systems.

Routing and Wavelength Assignment for WDM-based Optical Networks Bijoy Chand Chatterjee, Nityananda Sarma, Partha Pratim Sahu, Eiji Oki, 2016-10-01 This book presents an in depth treatment of routing and wavelength assignment for optical networks and focuses specifically on quality of service and fault resiliency issues. It reports on novel approaches for the development of routing and wavelength assignment schemes for fault resilient optical networks which improve their performance in terms of signal quality call blocking congestion level and reliability without a substantial increase in network setup cost. The book first presents a solution for reducing the effect of the wavelength continuity constraint during the routing and wavelength assignment phase. Further it reports on an approach allowing the incorporation of a traffic grooming mechanism with routing and wavelength assignment to enhance the effective channel utilization of a given capacity optical network using fewer electrical optical electrical conversions. As a third step it addresses a quality of service provision scheme for wavelength division multiplexing WDM based optical networks. Lastly the book describes the inclusion of a tree based fault resilience scheme in priority based dispersion reduced wavelength assignment schemes for the purpose of improving network reliability while maintaining a better utilization of network resources. Mainly intended for graduate students and researchers the book provides them with extensive information on both fundamental and advanced technologies for routing and wavelength assignment in optical networks.
