For each subheading on the right, include several pieces of corresponding information.
Operant Conditioning What ways are the Law of Effect and the Contingency Chamber ways of learning?	Basic Forms of Learning <ul style="list-style-type: none">Operant Conditioning is where organisms provide their own actions with consequences. Actions followed by satisfying rewards those followed by satisfying punishments.B.F. Skinner's work explained on what Edward Thorndike called the LAW OF EFFECT, the principle that behaviors followed by favorable consequences become more likely and that behaviors followed by unfavorable consequences become less likely.Skinner designed an OPERANT CHAMBER, known as the Skinner Box. The box has a lever that an animal presses or a key that the animal pulls to obtain a reward of food or water.
Skinner's Experiments How are reinforcement and shaping similar?	Law of Effect <ul style="list-style-type: none">REINFORCEMENT is in operant conditioning, any event that strengthens the behavior it follows.SHAPING is an operant conditioning procedure in which successive goals (behaviors) lead toward more and more approximations of the desired behavior. Shaping is learned behavior and guides the rat's actions toward the desired behavior.DISCRIMINATIVE STIMULUS in the operant conditioning, a stimulus that elicits a response after association with reinforcement.

Mod 6 - Correlation and Experimentation
Each subheading on the right hand side should include one or two sentences of corresponding information.
Correlation	Correlation is a statistical measure of the degree to which two variables are related. It is represented by a number between -1 and 1. A positive correlation indicates that as one variable increases, the other variable also tends to increase. A negative correlation indicates that as one variable increases, the other variable tends to decrease. A correlation of 0 indicates no relationship between the variables. Correlation and Causation Correlation does not imply causation. Just because two variables are correlated does not mean that one variable causes the other to change. Causation implies that one variable is responsible for changes in another variable.

Mod 28 - The Nervous and Endocrine Systems
Each subheading on the right hand side should include one or two sentences of corresponding information.
The Nervous System	The nervous system is the body's communication system. It consists of the brain, spinal cord, and peripheral nerves. The brain is the central control center, and the spinal cord and peripheral nerves carry messages between the brain and the rest of the body. The nervous system is responsible for controlling and coordinating all of the body's activities.
The Peripheral Nervous System	The peripheral nervous system (PNS) consists of all the nerves in the body that are not part of the brain or spinal cord. It includes the cranial nerves, which connect the brain to the rest of the body, and the spinal nerves, which connect the spinal cord to the rest of the body. The PNS is responsible for carrying messages between the brain and the rest of the body.
The Central Nervous System	The central nervous system (CNS) consists of the brain and spinal cord. It is the main control center for the body's activities. The brain is the largest part of the CNS and is responsible for processing information and making decisions. The spinal cord is a long, thin structure that runs down the back and is responsible for carrying messages between the brain and the rest of the body.
The Endocrine System	The endocrine system is the body's chemical communication system. It consists of the thyroid gland, pituitary gland, and other glands. These glands release hormones into the bloodstream, which then travel to various parts of the body to regulate functions such as growth, metabolism, and reproduction. The endocrine system works closely with the nervous system to control the body's activities.
