

MEDIA STUDIES—THEORIES AND THEORISTS

Theory	Theorist	Summary	Nutshell
Semiotics	Roland Barthes	The study of signs and meaning	Texts communicate their ideas through signification. Signs function at a literal level (signifier, denotation) as well as a figurative level (metaphor). Exposure to certain symbolic constructions can become self-evident, as the sign becomes a code.
Narratology	Tzvetan Todorov	The study of narrative	All narratives share a basic structure, moving from one equilibrium to another. These two states of equilibrium are separated by disruption or imbalance. The way that narratives resolve can have ideological significance.
Genre Theory	Steve Neale	The classification of media products	Genres are dominated by repetition of codes and conventions but must also incorporate hybridity. Genres change as they borrow from and overlap with each other (hybridity and subcultures). Genres exist within specific economic, institutional and industrial contexts.
Structuralism	Claude Lévi-Strauss	The underlying structures through which meanings are made	Texts can be understood through an analysis of their underlying structure. Meaning is often produced through oppositional pairs (e.g. good v. evil). The resolution of these binary opposites can have ideological significance.
Postmodernism	Jean Baudrillard	The making of meanings in a post-structuralist world.	The boundaries between the "real" and "mediated" worlds have collapsed. Signs are a process of signification with no signifier underlying them; they no longer represent reality. Mediated images now seem more "real" than the reality they supposedly represent.
Theories of Representation	Stuart Hall	How representations are constructed.	Representation is the production of meaning through language (a system of signs). Stereotyping reduces people and things to a few simple characteristics or traits. Stereotyping tends to occur where there is disparity of power, with subordinated/
Theories of Identity	David Gauntlett	Media help us to construct our identities.	Media provides us with "tools" and resources that we use to shape our identities. In the past, these media toolboxes were simple; as the mediated world has become more complex, so too have our identities. Media now provide us with models — a pick-and-mix of different ideas that we can choose from.
Feminist Theory	Liesbet van Zoonen	Gender is constructed through discourse.	Gender, as a product of discourse, changes depending on cultural and historical contexts. The objectification of women's bodies is core to Western patriarchal culture. The codes used in mainstream media to construct the male body are different from those used to construct the female body.
