Measuring The Mind Education And Psychology In England C1860 C1990:

Measuring the Mind Adrian Wooldridge, 1994-11-10 The central claim of Measuring the Mind is that contrary to popular opinion the psychologists who dominated educational policy making between the wars were educational progressives and political radicals. They argued that education should reflect the requirements of children rather than the convenience of adults and regarded intelligence testing as an instrument of child centred education. These psychologists owed their political inspiration to the meritocratic ideal and lost popularity with the waning of this ideal after the war. Four main themes dominate the discussion: the emergence of educational psychology as a distinct discipline; the recent history of ideas about children's mental development; the role of experts in formulating educational policy; and the rise and fall of the measurement of merit.

Assessing Intelligence Sara Lyons, 2022-08-24 How did Victorian novelists engage with the new theories of human intelligence that emerged from late nineteenth century psychology and evolutionary science? Assessing Intelligence traces the genealogy of the modern concept of IQ. It examines how five writers: George Eliot, Thomas Hardy, Henry James, HG Wells and Virginia Woolf used the bildungsroman or the novel of education to wrestle with the moral and political implications of the IQ model of intelligence and the fantasies of meritocracy it provoked. Drawing upon the work of Michel Foucault and Jacques Rancière, Sara Lyons argues that Victorian and Edwardian novelists were by turns complicit in the biopolitics of intelligence and sought radical ways to affirm the equality of minds.

The Handbook of International School Psychology Shane R. Jimerson, Thomas D. Oakland, Peter T. Farrell, Peter Farrell, 2007 The Handbook of International School Psychology will be THE major resource on the profession and its various applications in different countries. It is a must read for school psychologists and professionals from related disciplines who wish to understand, monitor and shape the field of school psychology.
