The treatments in this guide range from low cost measures such as improvements to signal timing and signage to high cost measures such as intersection reconstruction or grade separation. Topics covered include fundamental principles of user needs, geometric design and traffic design, and operation safety and operational analysis techniques, and a wide variety of treatments to address existing or projected problems, including individual movements and approaches, pedestrian and bicycle treatments, and corridor techniques. It also covers alternative intersection forms that improve intersection performance through the use of indirect left turns and other treatments. Each treatment includes a discussion of safety operational performance multimodal issues and physical and economic factors that the practitioner should consider Although the guide focuses primarily on high volume signalized intersections many treatments are applicable for lower volume intersections as well The information contained in this guide is based on the latest research available on treatments and best practices in use by jurisdictions across the United States Additional resources and references are highlighted for the student practitioner researcher or decisionmaker who wishes to learn more about a particular subject Design for Right-turn Treatments at Unsignalized Intersections and Driveways Tanweer Hasan,Robert W. Stokes,1996 Guidelines for right turn treatments at unsignalized intersections and driveways on the state highway system of Kansas were developed in this study Two types of treatments full width lane and taper were considered over the do nothing radius treatment THE guidelines were based on the results of an economic analysis conducted over a wide range of traffic volumes and speeds A simple model was developed to determine the operational effects of right turn movements at unsignalized intersections and driveways on high speed highways The operational effects were estimated in terms of delay and excess fuel consumption experienced by through vehicles due to the right turns The relationship between speed differential and accidents was used to estimate the reduction in right turn same direction rear end accidents that would be expected to result from the provision of a right turn treatment Comparison with other guidelines and validation of existing right turn treatments at the study sites indicate that the range of the guidelines developed in this study is reasonable They are also more definitive because they consider highway operating speed They are more flexible in determining an appropriate treatment because an intermediate
