

TRACTION WINGS

The Spitfire's leading edge slats had a very thin nose section, which helped increase drag but also limited the capacity of its wing fairings.

MAGIC MERLIN

The first Spitfires used the Merlin 35 engine, but after 1940 the upgraded Merlin 45 gave the Spitfire much better performance at lower altitudes, becoming the most produced version of the fighter.

MARK OF AN ACE

Many units of the Canadian No 107 Wing, including their aircraft with a red nose and tail wing Commander "Ammo" Johnson, decorated his cockpit fairings in dark green. By war's end, Johnson became the leading British Ace with 18 victories.

ROTATIVE IDENTIFICATION

By 1940, the Allies had established an especially easy French recognition panel highly visual "invasion panels" on their aircraft to make them easier to identify over occupied areas.

RAID KNOCKERS

Most Mark IVs had four .303 machine guns and had 20mm cannons, but late war models replaced the .303s with a pair of heavier .50-caliber machine guns.

Bowyer,1980 The story of the Spitfire and all the technical changes and developments of this great aircraft are told by one of Britain's leading aviation historians Chaz Bowyer

Spitfire Dan Patterson,Ron Dick,2000

The Spitfire Bob

Carruthers,2012-07 The Supermarine Spitfire was a British single seat fighter aircraft used by the Royal Air Force and many other Allied countries throughout the Second World War The Spitfire continued to be used as a front line fighter and in secondary roles into the 1950s It was produced in greater numbers than any other British aircraft and was the only British fighter in production throughout the war The Spitfire was designed as a short range high performance interceptor aircraft designed by R J Mitchell The Spitfire's elliptical wing had a thin cross section allowing a higher top speed than several contemporary fighters including the Hawker Hurricane Speed was seen as essential to carry out the mission of home defence against enemy bombers During the Battle of Britain the Spitfire was perceived by the public as the RAF fighter of the battle though the more numerous Hawker Hurricane shouldered a greater proportion of the burden against the Luftwaffe The Spitfire units had a lower attrition rate and a higher victory to loss ratio than those flying Hurricanes After the Battle of Britain the Spitfire became the backbone of RAF Fighter Command and saw action in the European Mediterranean Pacific and the South East Asian theatres Much loved by its pilots the Spitfire served in several roles including interceptor photo reconnaissance fighter bomber carrier based fighter and trainer It was built in many variants using several wing configurations

Spitfire's Forgotten Designer Mike

Roussel,2013-03-01 The Supermarine Spitfire was a classic design well known for its efforts in defending British shores

during the Second World War However while Reginald Mitchell is rightly celebrated for his original design of the Spitfire the role of Joe Smith in the development of the Spitfire is often overlooked Smith was an integral member of the design team from the earliest days and on Mitchell's death in 1937 he was appointed design office manager before becoming chief designer. Smith's dedicated leadership in the development of the Spitfire during the war as well as his efforts on post war jet aircraft deserve their place in history. Charting the fascinating history of Supermarine from 1913 to 1958 when the company ceased its operations in Southampton shortly after Joe Smith's death in 1956 this book tells its story through the eyes of apprentices and many other members of Smith's team. Marvellous photographs add to the sense of what it was like to work under Joe Smith at the drawing boards of one of Britain's most famous wartime aviation manufacturers. Spitfire IX, XI & XVI Pilot's Notes Great Britain.
