

BASICS OF PETROLEUM REFINING FOR NON-TECHNICAL PERSONNEL

The program content focuses on the basic definitions of petroleum refining with a brief explanation of crude oil chemistry and the impact on the refinery, and a fundamental discussion of the nature and purpose of the major refining processes. In addition, the characteristics of refinery products will be explored. Finally, the basic economics associated with refining and the effects of recent environmental regulations on product processing will be examined.

The sessions will be presented by a knowledgeable, experienced industry professional who is well-versed in all of the major processing areas of petroleum refining.

This program has been designed for non-technical personnel assigned to positions in petroleum refineries, corporate offices, and supplier companies. The content of the program is based upon the assumption that those in attendance do not have a formal education in engineering and chemistry and do not work in highly technical environments. Attendance at this course will be beneficial to support personnel such as environmental professionals, accountants, business managers, administrative and legal staff, sales and marketing personnel, insurance representatives, personnel managers, financial professionals, and government officials. The program should also be useful for newly-hired refinery plant operators. Finally, the course may serve as a prerequisite for those who do not have a technical background but who want to attend the more detailed petroleum refining processing program offered by Refining Process Services.
