Indigenous Health and Well-Being in the COVID-19 Pandemic Nicholas D. Spence, Fatih Sekercioglu, 2022-08-31

This book investigates the impact of the COVID 19 pandemic on the health and well being of Indigenous Peoples and assesses the policy responses taken by governments and Indigenous communities across the world. Bringing together innovative research and policy insights from a range of disciplines this book investigates the impact of the COVID 19 pandemic on the health and well being of Indigenous Peoples across the world with coverage of North America, Central America, Africa and Oceania. Further it explores the actions taken by governments and Indigenous communities in addressing the challenges posed by this public health crisis. The book emphasises the social determinants of health and well being reflecting on issues such as self governance, human rights, law, housing, socioeconomic conditions, access to health care, culture, environmental deprivation and resource extraction. Chapters also highlight the resilience and agency of Indigenous Peoples in combating the COVID 19 pandemic despite the legacy of colonialism, patterns of systemic discrimination and social exclusion. Providing concrete pathways for improving the conditions of Indigenous Peoples in the wake of the COVID 19 pandemic this book is essential reading for researchers across indigenous studies, public health and social policy.

Routledge Handbook of Sport and COVID-19 Stephen Frawley, Nico Schulenkorf, 2022-08-24

This book examines the initial impact of the coronavirus pandemic on global sport and the varying consequences of the sport shutdown on all levels of society. It also considers the many lessons that have been learnt so that sport stakeholders can successfully adjust and operate under the new normal. Featuring authors cases and examples from around the world the book explores the impact of COVID 19 on sport at all levels from community sport where local clubs, gyms and development programmes had to find ways to survive with pitches closed and projects cancelled to the major professional sport leagues and sport mega events with events postponed and teams playing in empty stadia. It considers the economic, social and developmental impacts of the pandemic including physical, mental and social wellbeing and looks at how key professional and community sport organisations have reacted to the crisis reflecting on the lessons learnt and preparations for future pandemics and challenges of similar size and significance. With COVID 19 now endemic in the global population this is an essential reference for anybody working in sport from students and researchers to managers, policymakers and development officers.

Self-report System for Agricultural Injuries and Near-misses Nicole Lynn Becklinger, 2020 Approximately 100 agricultural workers experience a lost time injury each day Current surveillance misses less severe injuries and near misses and does not provide detailed information that helps prevent injuries An online self report system for agricultural injuries and near misses was created to address limitations of current agricultural injury surveillance The self report system was developed and then followed by three rounds of interviews with agricultural workers and agricultural safety and health professionals which guided revisions to the self report survey and website During this pilot study 29 reports were collected and provided insights for the design of the system In the interviews subjective satisfaction ratings of the website and survey increased significantly between round 1 and round 3 for both participant groups Over the 12 months of main data collection an additional 61 reports were collected online Of the reports captured 27% contained near misses and 40% contained injuries requiring no treatment or first aid The severity of incidents that took place within a year of the reporting date was 0

84 on a scale of 0 to 4 which was 1 8 points lower than incidents that happened more than a year before they were reported The percent of injuries resulting from tractors and animals was not found to differ between the self report dataset and the result of a previous study the Regional Rural Injury Study The percent of machinery injuries was higher in the RRIS but not significantly For many body parts including head eyes arms and injuries to other unspecified parts of the body there was not a significant difference between the self report and the results of the National Agricultural Workers Survey an agricultural injury survey of US crop workers conducted by the US Department of Labor The percent of torso injuries was significantly lower in the self report data While the reporting rate of 1 17 reports per week was lower than the goal of 10 reports per week the number of page views was 172 per week which is similar to the view rates of local blogs and several established agricultural safety and health websites Additionally Facebook targeted advertisements resulted in one additional report for every 7 75 spent While the number of reports was lower than the goal there is evidence that self report may be a viable method for collecting detailed agricultural injury reports This research represents an important first step towards online agricultural injury surveillance on a larger scale which in turn will lead to better interventions and a reduction in injuries and fatalities Injury Report Log Thor Wisteria,2016-10-27 This workbook features both a female and a male figure to be used to record injuries Injury Report Log Thor Wisteria,2016-10-27 This workbook features a female figure to be used to record injuries
