essential resource for nurses pursuing advanced education and nurses desiring to enhance their expertise in making policy and facilitating its change. The book addresses recent changes impacting health care and many other topics including information on the increased need for primary care providers, how full practice authority has been implemented in different states, the need for an enhanced RN role in ambulatory care, and ongoing changes to the Affordable Care Act. This edition describes the distinct role of nurses impacting policies on the front lines of health care. Current issues with detailed examples of how nurses can exert influence at local, state, national, and global levels at each step of the policymaking process are presented. This second edition emphasizes collaboration within health care institutions, professional organizations, and government for the development of policies from bedside to boardroom. Using descriptive cases, the book delves into the growing role of nurses in elected and appointed office. The book clarifies the process of identifying issues that need a policy solution. A timely contribution focuses on evaluating policy sources such as Fake News. It stresses how evidence must be used to strengthen policy initiatives. Woven throughout are essential themes basic to healthcare: ethics, leadership, safety, care access, and quality of care.

From Bedside to Boardroom Tim Brendle, 2025 Leadership in nursing is not a role many set out to achieve when they begin their careers For most nursing professionals the initial focus is on patient care those vital immediate moments that define the essence of the profession Yet as time passes nurses often find themselves drawn into roles that require more than clinical expertise and much more than bedside manners They are asked to manage teams implement policies and make decisions that impact not only individual patients but entire units and sometimes entire organizations This natural evolution can present itself as both a challenge and an opportunity It is no secret that healthcare systems around the world are at a crossroads Recent shortages in staffing the rapid advancement of medical technologies and growing patient populations demand leaders who can navigate these complexities with confidence and foresight For nurses this means stepping out of their comfort zones and into a world where their voices and decisions carry weight far beyond the bedside Consider this how often are the best bedside nurses unexpectedly tapped for leadership roles without formal preparation It is a scenario many in the profession can relate to While every nurse's journey is unique many share a common starting point an unforeseen opportunity For me the path to leadership began with a simple request Like many nurse managers I found that excelling at my job meant being entrusted with special projects and additional responsibilities One day my director called me into the office and asked if I would step in as the interim manager until a replacement could be found Five years later I was still the manager This story resonates because it reflects a fundamental truth in nursing the transition into leadership is often unplanned and the resources to succeed are rarely handed to you While ambition and drive are vital leadership cannot be rushed particularly in healthcare Millennials and Gen Z nurses often value purpose flexibility and innovation qualities that make them uniquely suited for leadership Nursing Times, Nursing
