

New England Colonies

New England colonies were created by the Puritans and Pilgrims. Puritans and Pilgrims were a group of people from England. They moved away from England for religious freedom. These colonies were in the northeastern part of America. The four colonies included: Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

Culture

Puritans and Pilgrims were very religious. Most came to America so they could follow their religion differently than they did in England. These colonists did not like it when people followed different religions.

Government

Rules of the law and government were very important to these colonists. People in this colony often gave their opinion about local decisions. This was important to people in the New England colony. It was important because Britain was not allowing colonists to give their opinions in other, bigger government decisions.

Economy

Life in this colony was hard! These colonies dealt with really difficult weather. The winters were long and cold. They even got lots of snow! This made farming hard for New England colonists. Most colonists had small farms. These farms grew just enough food for the families that ran them. This limited resources for colonists. They needed to bring in food and other resources from other places to survive. This means that shipping was important to their economy. Also, shipping was easy because the New England colonies are against the ocean.

Education

Education in the New England colonies covered most subjects. There were lots of lessons about the Bible and religion. Adults wanted their children to be able read the Bible. They used a hornbook to help them memorize things. Hornbooks are kind of like textbooks. Students placed a paper with lessons on the wooden, paddle-shaped hornbook.
