Monthly Weather Review ,1994      Optics for Science and New Technology International Commission for Optics. Congress,1996      Immunity to Malaria and Vaccine Strategies Kevin N. Couper,Julius C. Hafalla,Noah S. Butler,Ashraf H. Haque,2019-10-10 Malaria caused by infection with protozoan parasites belonging to the genus Plasmodium is a highly prevalent and lethal infectious disease responsible for 435 000 deaths in 2017 Optimism that malaria was gradually being controlled and eliminated has been tempered by recent evidence that malaria control measures are beginning to stall and that Plasmodium parasites are developing resistance to front line anti malarial drugs An important milestone has been the recent development of a malaria vaccine Mosquirix for use in humans the very first against a parasitic infection Unfortunately this vaccine has modest and short lived efficacy with vaccinated individuals possibly being at increased risk of severe malarial disease when protection wanes Thus to define new ways to combat malaria there remains an urgent requirement to identify the immune mechanisms that promote resistance to malarial disease and to understand why these so often fail The review and primary research articles in this Research Topic illustrate the breadth of research performed worldwide aimed to understand the biology of the Plasmodium parasite the roles of the various cell types that act within the immune response against the parasite and the parasitological and immunological basis of severe malarial disease The articles in section 1 exemplify the different vaccination strategies being developed and tested by the research community in the fight against malaria The articles in section 2 review important overarching aspects of malaria immunology and the use of models to study human malaria The articles in section 3 describe the ways through which the Plasmodium parasite is initially recognised by the immune system during infection how the parasite can directly impact this critical event to restrict anti Plasmodial immunity and resolve the roles of key innate cell populations such as dendritic cells in coordinating malarial immunity The articles in sections 4 6 outline the roles T and B cell populations play during malaria highlighting the activation diversification and regulation of the crucial cell types during malaria and discuss some of the reasons adaptive immunity to malaria is often considered so poor compared with other diseases The articles in section 7 provide up to date information on the pathogenesis of cerebral malaria bridging our understanding of the syndrome in humans with information learned from animal models Overall the articles in this research many of which are published by leaders in the malaria field emphasize the imagination and technical advances being employed by researchers against malaria We acknowledge the initiation and support of this Research Topic by the International Union of Immunological Societies IUIS We hereby state publicly that the IUIS has had no editorial input in articles included in this Research Topic thus ensuring that all aspects of this Research Topic are evaluated objectively unbiased by any specific policy or opinion of the IUIS      Technical Digest [of The] 1973 International Electron Devices Meeting, December 3,4 and 5, 1973, Washington, D.C. ,1973      The Corporation Trust Company's 1913-1923 Income Tax Service ... Timmerhaus,1986 Journal of Heat Transfer ,1963 Publishes research on energy transfer in equipment and applied thermodynamic processes in all fields of mechanical engineering and related industries Topic areas include aerospace heat transfer environmental heat transfer gas turbine heat transfer heat and mass transfer in biotechnology heat transfer in electronic equipment heat transfer in energy systems heat transfer in fire and combustion systems and heat transfer in manufacturing and materials processing Government Reports Announcements ,1973 World Resource Review ,2000 Izvestiya Академия наук СССР,1970 Modulation-doped Field-effect Transistors Heinrich Daembkes,1991 Annales Geophysicae ,1996 RADECS ... ,1997 Bibliography of Scientific and Industrial Reports ,1973 Government Reports Announcements & Index ,1973 Canadian Journal of Mathematics ,1960 Refereed journal publishing longer papers of original mathematical research ETHANE ICE HAZE IN THE UPPER ATMOSPHERE OF URANUS (STRATOSPHERE). TERESA MARIA SCHULZ,1992 These results agree well with observations and suggest that a vapor sink of this nature is not only plausible but may play a key role in the stability and vertical development of the hazes in the upper atmosphere of Uranus Detection and Characterization of Deep Water Wave Breaking Using Moderate Incidence Angle Microwave Backscatter from the Sea Surface Andrew Thomas Jessup,1990 The importance of wave breaking in both microwave remote sensing and air sea interaction has led to this investigation of the utility of a Ku Band CW Doppler scatterometer to detect and characterize wave breaking in the open ocean Field and laboratory measurements by previous authors of microwave backscatter from sharp crested and breaking waves have shown that these events can exhibit characteristic signatures in moderate incidence angle measurements of the radar cross section RCS and Doppler spectrum Specifically breaking events have been associated with polarization independent sea spikes in the RCS accompanied by increased mean frequency and bandwidth of the Doppler spectrum Simultaneous microwave video and environmental measurements were made during the SAXON experiment off Chesapeake Bay in the fall of 1988 The scatterometer was pointed upwind with an incidence angle of 45 degrees and an illumination area small compared to the wavelength of the dominant surface waves An autocovariance estimation technique was used to produced time series of the RCS mean Doppler frequency and Doppler spectral bandwidth in real time The joint statistics of the microwave quantities indicative of breaking are used to investigate detection schemes for breaking events identified from the video recordings The most successful scheme is based on thresholds in both the RCS and the Doppler bandwidth determined from joint distributions for breaking and non breaking waves Microwave events consisting of a sea spike in the RCS accompanied by a large bandwidth are associated with the steep forward face of waves in the early stages of breaking The location of the illumination area with respect to the phase of the breaking wave the stage of breaking development and the orientation of an individual crest with respect to the antenna look direction all influence the detect ability of a breaking event occurring in the vicinity of the radar spot Since sea spikes tend to occur on the forward face of waves in the process of breaking the whitecap associated with a

given sea spike may occur after the crest of the wave responsible for the sea spike has passed the center of the illumination area Approximately 70% of the waves which produce whitecaps within a distance of 5m of the bore sight location are successfully identified by a threshold based detection scheme utilizing both RCS and bandwidth information The sea spike statistics are investigated as functions of wave field parameters and friction velocity  $u$  For VV and HH polarization the frequency of sea spike occurrence and the sea spike contribution to the mean RCS show an approximately cubic dependence on  $u$  which is consistent with theoretical modelling and various measures of whitecap coverage The data also suggest that the average RCS of an individual sea spike is not dependent on  $u$  At high friction velocities  $u \geq 40$  50cms l the contribution of sea spikes to the mean RCS is in the range of 5 10% for VV and 10 20% for HH The wind speed dependence of the percentage of crests producing sea spikes is comparable to that of the fraction of breaking crests reported by previous authors The percentage of wave crests producing sea spikes is found to vary approximately as  $Re^{-1.5}$  where  $Re$  is a Reynolds number based on  $u$  and the dominant surface wavelength This result agrees with measurements of the degree of wave breaking by previous authors and is shown to be consistent with a cubic dependence on  $u$  Models for the probability of wave breaking as a function of moments of the wave height spectrum are compared to our results The Doppler frequency and bandwidth measurements are also used to inquire into the kinematics of the breaking process
