2.5 Membrane Permeability

What Can Cross the Membrane?

Types of molecules that cross the membrane:

- Small nonpolar molecules (like  $O_2$  and  $CO_2$ ) can slip right through the phospholipid bilayer without any help. These molecules are small and nonpolar.
- Small polar uncharged molecules like water can slip through the membrane in small amounts. Water molecules are very small and can slip between phospholipids. But the membrane is not very permeable to other small polar molecules.
- Large polar molecules and ions (like glucose, amino acids,  $Na^+$ ,  $K^+$ , and  $Cl^-$ ) cannot cross the membrane on their own. They need transport proteins to help them cross. These molecules and ions typically cross through transport proteins in the membrane.

The hydrophobic tails of the phospholipids are the main barrier to the movement of molecules across the membrane. They repel water molecules and make it very challenging for them to cross alone.

How Different Molecules Cross the Membrane

Molecule Type	Examples	Can Cross Alone?	Needs Transport Protein
Small nonpolar	$O_2$ , $CO_2$ , $N_2$	Yes	No
Small polar uncharged	Water	Yes (limited)	Yes (large amounts)
Large polar	Glucose, amino acids	No	Yes
Ions	$Na^+$ , $K^+$ , $Cl^-$	No	Yes

1.5 Representing a Quantitative Variable with Graphs

Remember that a quantitative variable (or quantitative variable) refers to variables that can be measured and analyzed using statistical methods.

- A discrete variable can take on a limited number of values. The number of children in a family is an example of a discrete variable. Examples of discrete variables include the number of children in a family, the number of votes in an election, and the number of items in a collection.
- A continuous variable can take on an infinite number of values. Height, weight, and time are examples of continuous variables. Examples of continuous variables include the height of a person, the weight of a person, and the time it takes to run a mile.

This page will describe how to represent and display quantitative data. The following table is a summary of the different types of graphs that can be used to represent quantitative data. The goal is to help you understand the different types of graphs and how to choose the right one for your data.

2.5 The Demographic Transition Model

Remember the Demographic Transition Model? It was a major concept in human geography.

Demographic Transition Model

The Demographic Transition Model (DTM) is a model that describes the changes in a country's population over time. It is based on the idea that a country's population will grow rapidly in the early stages of development and then level off as the country becomes more developed.

Stage 1

Stage 1 is the earliest stage of the DTM, characterized by a high birth rate and a high death rate. Because of this, the natural increase rate is close to zero. The population grows very slowly, and the country remains in a state of poverty and underdevelopment.
