Gregg Bloche,2011-03-15 When we re ill we trust in doctors to put our well being first But medicine s expanding capability and soaring costs are putting this promise at risk Increasingly society is calling upon physicians to limit care and to use their skills on behalf of health plan bureaucrats public officials national security and courts of law And doctors are answering this call They re endangering patients veiling moral choices behind the language of science and at times compromising our liberties In The Hippocratic Myth Dr M Gregg Bloche marshals his expertise in medicine and the law to expose how Doctors are pushed into acting both as caregivers and cost cutters compromising their fidelity to patients Politics keeps doctors from giving war veterans the help they need Insurers and hospital administrators pressure doctors to discontinue life saving treatment even when patients and family members object Medicine has become a weapon in America s battles over abortion child custody criminal responsibility and the rights of gays and lesbians The war on terror has exploited clinical psychology to inflict harm Challenging provocative and insightful The Hippocratic Myth breaks the code of silence and issues a powerful warning about the need for doctors to forge a new compact with patients and society
