EU Law of Competition and Trade in the Pharmaceutical Sector Pablo Figueroa,Alejandro Guerrero,2019 This book provides a systematic analysis of the law and practice of EU competition and trade in the pharmaceutical sector Authored by leading private practitioners economists scholars and high level officials at competition regulators this work provides valuable insider knowledge on the application of law and policies to the pharmaceutical industry The work contains extensive commentary on the legislation and the latest case law and administrative precedents in this sector at both EU and national level including certain significant jurisdictions e g the US China Coverage of various key developments includes the recent pay for delay antitrust investigations the perennial issues around parallel trade and an examination of mergers among pharmaceutical companies and medical devices manufacturers In addition to the legal analysis it offers vital economic and business perspectives to ensure that the reader has the full range of tools with which to prepare for cases and conduct transactions within the pharmaceutical industry

The Politics of the Pharmaceutical Industry and Access to Medicines

Hans Löfgren, 2017-07-06 The book studies the pharmaceutical industry of India. It is one of the most successful stories of economic expansion and improvements in public health. Indian firms have made access to quality medicines possible and affordable in many developing countries. Indian pharmaceuticals are also exported on a large scale to the United States and other highly regulated markets. A wave of mergers, acquisitions, and tie-ups point to growing integration between Indian firms and global pharma multinationals. Please note Taylor Francis does not sell or distribute the Hardback in India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka.

The Patent-Competition Interface in Developing Countries

Thomas K. Cheng, 2021-12-16 This book proposes an approach to the patent competition interface for developing countries. It puts forward a theoretical framework after canvassing relevant policy considerations and examines the many reasons why patent protection is not essential for generating innovation incentives in developing countries. These include the tendency of the patent system to overcompensate innovators, the availability of other appropriation mechanisms for innovators to monetize their innovations, and the lack of appropriate technological capacity in many developing countries to take advantage of the incentives generated by the patent system. It also argues that developing countries with a small population need not pay heed to the impact of their patent system on the incentives of foreign innovators. It then proposes a classification of developing countries into production countries, technology adaptation countries, and proto innovation countries, and argues that dynamic efficiency considerations take on different meanings for developing countries depending on their technological capacities. For the vast majority of developing countries bereft of meaningful innovation capacity, foreign technology transfer is the main vehicle for technological progress. The chief dynamic policy consideration for these countries is hence incentives for technology transfer instead of innovation incentives. There are three main means of voluntary technology transfer: importation of technological goods, foreign direct investment, and technology licensing. Competition law regulation of patent exploitation practices interacts with these three means of technology transfer in different ways, and an appropriate approach to the patent competition interface for these countries needs to take these into account. Distilling all these considerations, the book proposes a development stage specific approach to the patent competition interface for developing countries. The approach is then applied to a number of patent exploitation practices, including unilateral refusal to deal, patent tying, excessive pricing for pharmaceuticals, reverse payment settlements, and restrictive licensing practices.
