Nordic Journal of African Studies ,1996 The Global Economic Crisis and the Developing World Ashwini Deshpande,Keith Nurse,2012-06-14 The world economy is currently in the throes of a global economic crisis reminiscent of the great depressions of the 1930s and the 1870s As back then the crisis has exposed the major structural imbalances in financial and credit markets in addition to global trade forcing many governments developed and developing to impose debilitating austerity measures that are exacerbating the structural weaknesses that caused the crisis in the first place This volume offers historical insights into the origins of the contemporary crisis as well as detailed analyses of the financial and trade dimensions an assessment of the technological and innovation context along with perspectives on the implications for unemployment and gender imbalances

The Demographics of Empire Karl Ittmann,Dennis D. Cordell,Gregory H. Maddox,2010-10-05 The Demographics of Empire is a collection of essays examining the multifaceted nature of the colonial science of demography in the last two centuries The contributing scholars of Africa and the British and French empires focus on three questions How have historians demographers and other social scientists understood colonial populations What were the demographic realities of African societies and how did they affect colonial systems of power Finally how did demographic theories developed in Europe shape policies and administrative structures in the colonies The essays approach the subject as either broad analyses of major demographic questions in Africa's history or focused case studies that demonstrate how particular historical circumstances in individual African societies contributed to differing levels of fertility mortality and migration Together the contributors to The Demographics of Empire question demographic orthodoxy and in particular the assumption that African societies in the past exhibited a single demographic regime characterized by high fertility and high mortality

Global-Local Negotiations. Development and Culture Francis Arackal Thummy,2023-03-27 Academic Paper from the year 2013 in the subject Politics Topic Development Politics course Development Studies Cultural Studies Peace Studies Environmental Studies language English abstract Development has to be understood holistically It is very closely connected to culture which is very difficult to define Cultural factors have powerfully affected the pace of development This paper begins with the status of culture in the international development paradigm Then the author will examine the relationship between culture and sustainable development going on to reflect the importance of culture in environmental sustainability Next the paper will discuss the role of culture for peace and reconciliation for only when there is peace there can be proper development In the last part of his paper the author looks at the relationship between media culture and development In the media mediated society which we live in today culture is influenced by the media resulting in what is called media culture which leads to a unique kind of development The recognition that development programmes and strategies at the global regional and local levels should integrate culture within their goals indicators and targets is still not as widespread as it should be Without such a globally agreed and shared recognition the potential of culture to contribute to sustainable development risks being largely untapped Giving due consideration to specific settings a stronger concern for local cultural perspectives in which the development processes should be conceived and implemented is paramount
