For a "Less is More" approach, see this post.

- the model is usually not very useful, as it is not able to distinguish between the different components
- the model is often not able to predict the long-term development of a system, because the model is not able to predict the changes in the environment
- the model is often not able to predict the long-term development of a system, because the model is not able to predict the changes in the environment
