The 'Mother of all Trades' Milja van Tielhof, 2021-12-28 In the early modern period the Dutch called the grain trade on the Baltic the mother of all trades as they considered it to be the basis of most of their trade and shipping and indeed the cornerstone of the Dutch economy For a very long time the mass grain exports from the Baltic were dominated by the Dutch and Amsterdam was the central entrep t from which the grain was distributed over the Dutch hinterland and the rest of Europe This book aims to present a general history of the mother of all trades and particularly shows the fundamental importance for transaction costs including the costs for transport insurance and protection the quality of the local services sector in Amsterdam the influence of monetary and mercantile policies and the efficiency of trade organization

Shaping Medieval Markets Jessica Dijkman, 2011-08-11 The late Middle Ages witnessed the transformation of the county of Holland from a peripheral agrarian region to a highly commercialised and urbanised one This book examines how the organisation of commodity markets contributed to this remarkable development Comparing Holland to England and Flanders the book shows that Holland s specific history of reclamation and settlement had given rise to a favourable balance of powers between state nobility towns and rural communities that reduced opportunities for rent seeking and favoured the rise of efficient markets This allowed burghers peasants and fishermen to take full advantage of new opportunities presented by changing economic and ecological circumstances in the late fourteenth and early fifteenth centuries

Port-Cities and their Hinterlands Robert Lee, Paul McNamara, 2022-03-14 This interdisciplinary book brings together eleven original contributions by scholars in the United Kingdom continental Europe America and Japan which represent innovative and important research on the relationship between cities and their hinterlands They discuss the factors which determined the changing nature of port hinterland relations in particular and highlight the ways in which port cities have interacted and intersected with their different hinterlands as a result of both in and out migration cultural exchange and the wider flow of goods services and information Historically maritime commerce was a powerful driving force behind urbanisation and by 1850 seaports accounted for a significant proportion of the world s great cities Ports acted as nodal points for the flow of population and the dissemination of goods and services but their role as growth poles also affected the economic transformation of both their hinterlands and forelands In fact most ports irrespective of their size had a series of overlapping hinterlands whose shifting importance reflected changes in trading relations political frameworks migration patterns family networks and cultural exchange Urban historians have been criticised for being concerned primarily with self contained processes which operate within the boundaries of individual towns and cities and as a result the key relationships between cities and their hinterlands have often been neglected The chapters in this work focus primarily on the determinants of port hinterland linkages and analyse these as distinct but interrelated fields of interaction Marking a significant contribution to the literature in this field Port Cities and their Hinterlands provides essential reading for students and scholars of the history of economics
