The Nervous System

The nervous system is an extremely complex network consisting of nerve cells and supporting structures that extend throughout the human body. The main purpose of all the nervous system and its parts is to actually carry and carry information, and also to respond to stimuli. The nervous system is divided into two main parts: the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS).

Central Nervous System

The central nervous system, or CNS, is the part of the nervous system that is located in the brain and spinal cord. It is the most complex part of the nervous system. The brain is the control center of the body and is located within the protective hard skull. Layers of meningeal membranes and cerebrospinal fluid also protect the CNS. The spinal cord extends from the brain through the vertebral column. It has an S-shaped curve to the spinal cord, and a part of the spinal cord, called the cauda equina, extends from the lower back into the body.

Peripheral Nervous System

There are all parts of the nervous system that are not the CNS, and they make up the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The PNS is made up of all sensory neurons that are capable of receiving stimuli, and all other neurons that are capable of responding to stimuli. For example, sensory neurons in the eye and ear are capable of receiving light stimuli and sound vibrations, and sending the information to the CNS.

The PNS is divided into two main parts: the somatic nervous system, which controls voluntary movements, and the autonomic nervous system, which controls involuntary movements. The somatic nervous system is the part of the nervous system that controls voluntary movements, such as walking, talking, and writing. The autonomic nervous system is the part of the nervous system that controls involuntary movements, such as heart rate, blood pressure, and digestion. The autonomic nervous system is divided into two main parts: the sympathetic nervous system, which is responsible for the "fight or flight" response, and the parasympathetic nervous system, which is responsible for the "rest and digest" response.

The Brain

The brain is the most complex part of the nervous system. It is the control center of the body and is responsible for all of the body's functions. The brain is divided into two main parts: the cerebrum, which is the largest part of the brain and is responsible for most of the body's functions, and the cerebellum, which is a smaller part of the brain and is responsible for coordination and balance. The brain is also divided into four main lobes: the frontal lobe, which is responsible for decision-making and planning; the parietal lobe, which is responsible for sensory processing; the temporal lobe, which is responsible for hearing and memory; and the occipital lobe, which is responsible for vision.
