Rethinking Value-Added Models in Education Audrey Amrein-Beardsley, 2014-04-24 Since passage of the No Child Left Behind Act in 2001 academic researchers, econometricians and statisticians have been exploring various analytical methods of documenting students' academic progress over time. Known as value added models (VAMs), these methods are meant to measure the value a teacher or school adds to student learning from one year to the next. To date, however, there is very little evidence to support the trustworthiness of these models. What is becoming increasingly evident yet often ignored mainly by policymakers is that VAMs are 1) unreliable, 2) invalid, 3) nontransparent, 4) unfair, 5) fraught with measurement errors, and 6) being inappropriately used to make consequential decisions regarding such things as teacher pay, retention, and termination. Unfortunately, their unintended consequences are not fully recognized at this point either. Given such the timeliness of this well-researched and thoughtful book cannot be overstated. This book sheds important light on the debate surrounding VAMs and thereby offers states and practitioners a highly important resource from which they can move forward in more research-based ways.

Mathematical and Statistics Anxiety: Educational, Social, Developmental and Cognitive

Perspectives Kinga Morsanyi, Irene Cristina Mammarella, Denes Szűcs, Carlo Tomasetto, Caterina Primi, Erin Anne Maloney, 2017-01-19 Mathematical anxiety is a feeling of tension, apprehension, or fear which arises when a person is faced with mathematical content. The negative consequences of mathematical anxiety are well-documented. Students with high levels of mathematical anxiety might underperform in important test situations, they tend to hold negative attitudes towards mathematics, and they are likely to opt out of elective mathematics courses, which also affects their career opportunities. Although at the university level many students do not continue to study mathematics, social science students are confronted with the fact that their disciplines involve learning about statistics, another potential source of anxiety for students who are uncomfortable with dealing with numerical content. Research on mathematical anxiety is a truly interdisciplinary field with contributions from educational, developmental, cognitive, social, and neuroscience researchers. The current collection of papers demonstrates the diversity of the field, offering both new empirical contributions and reviews of existing studies. The contributors also outline future directions for this line of research.

Left Behind Edward P. St. John, Victoria J. Milazzo Bigelow, Kim Callahan Lijana, Johanna C. Massé, 2015-11-30
Urban schools are falling short of preparing students for college In Left Behind a team of education scholars led by Edward P St John argues that American cities have been engaged for the past three decades in a radical but failing effort to transform general and vocational high schools into college preparatory institutions By examining the educational reforms in four urban charter schools across the United States and four public high schools in New York City Left Behind reveals how educators contend with the challenge of developing new courses while providing social support for students to build college-going cultures The research shows that district schools struggle to comply with standards that leave little room to develop advanced thematic curricula and that charter schools have not succeeded in substantially raising student test scores Many students who start in rigorous charter schools transfer back to public schools while both public and charter schools struggle to prepare their students for college level work Left Behind provides crucial insights into the troubling trajectory of public policy while offering teachers and administrators effective strategies for overcoming barriers
