

BOAT TRIM SETUP AND ADJUSTMENT

Proper trim on your boat is very important for the safety and comfort of all passengers. Initial trimming of your boat should be handled in these steps: weight distribution, initial motor trim, integrated trim tab adjustment, and then final motor trim.

First, the performance of your boat depends on the load weight and distribution. Begin by evenly distributing the weight, from bow to stern, and also from port to starboard. When preparing to adjust the integrated trim tabs, the total weight and its distribution should be similar to how the boat will be used the majority of the time in the water.

Motor Trim Adjustment

Next, find a safe waterway and run the boat up to full speed. Slowly adjust the motor trim out/up until propeller cavitation just begins and engine RPM increases without an increase in speed. Trim the motor back in/down until cavitation stops - usually only one or two quick down adjustments are all that's required.

At this point the bow may be porpoising slightly (bow continues to bounce up, then down). One or two quick down adjustments to the motor trim should stop the porpoising and the boat should now be running at its maximum speed. The boat spray should be emanating from the back 1/3 of the boat.

Integrated Trim Tab Adjustment

If your boat is still porpoising, then the integrated trim tabs should be adjusted down. Bend the tabs at the points indicated in the drawings and equal distances on both port and starboard sides. Make small adjustments of no more than approx. 1/8" at a time and retest at full speed. Adjust only the trim tab portions from the transducer bracket to the center keel.

If the boat is plowing or steering is difficult, the trim tab should be adjusted up. If your boat lists to the port side adjust the trim tab down on the port side and up on the starboard side. If your boat lists to the starboard side adjust the trim tab down on the starboard side and up on the port side.

It is very important that (1) the motor trim is adjusted first as mentioned above, (2) the weight in the boat (gear and passengers) should be distributed similar to and close to the magnitude of how the boat will typically be run. Downrigger weights, crab pots, full coolers, multiple passengers, etc. together can have a significant effect to the on-plane performance of the boat.

Ideally there should be a reasonable range of trim adjustment between the maximum speed settings and full in/down position of the motor. This will allow a range of boat position necessary to both attain a high speed and efficient plane (bow up) as well as a controlled plowing (bow down) desired when navigating though rougher water. If this range is not attainable, other factors may be the cause: excessive or uneven distribution of weight, or an under-powered motor can affect the on-plane performance of your boat.

Outboard Engines Edwin R. Sherman, 1997 Outboard Engines fills the gap between owner's manuals that don't even tell you how to change a spark plug and professional shop manuals that detail how to do a complete rebuild. It covers basic principles and techniques for a wide variety of outboards four stroke as well as two stroke with the emphasis on maintenance and advanced troubleshooting. Ed Sherman's clear explanations and diagrams take you step by step through the basics and beyond helping you track down even the most elusive problems a modern outboard can throw in your way. His methodical approach can save you a world of frustration and peril as well as time and a half weekend mechanics charges. Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, 1991 Admiralty Manual of Seamanship Great Britain.
