Submarine Groundwater Discharge Nicholas Reed de Sieyes,2011 is a numerical investigation of groundwater flow at the land sea interface forced by precipitation and evapotranspiration typical of the Mediterranean climate of coastal California A numerical groundwater model was developed using the variable density groundwater flow code SEAWAT 2000 to examine the influence of seasonally variable recharge conditions typical of coastal California on the magnitude and timing of fresh submarine groundwater discharge from a generic coastal aquifer with a constant head non tidal ocean boundary Model dimensions and hydrogeologic characteristics were chosen based on a combination of observations from field studies at Stinson Beach California and published numerical investigations of coastal groundwater flow Average monthly recharge was calculated from historical precipitation records and potential evapotranspiration rates calculated from climatological observations made near the field site Calculated recharge was approximately sinusoidal across the year with positive recharge rates dominated by precipitation during the rainy winter and negative recharge rates dominated by evapotranspiration during the hot precipitation free summer Rates of fresh discharge from the model aquifer to the ocean exhibited similar temporal characteristics for two modeled scenarios a first including a constant head fresh landward boundary condition and a second including a constant flux fresh landward boundary condition Discharge in both models peaked in January during the period of maximum precipitation and recharge and declined until reaching a minimum in September two months after the minimum recharge period in July Minimum simulated discharge rates for two simulated scenarios were 17% and 18% lower in September than the maximum simulated discharges in winter Monthly mean discharge from Lagunitas Creek a creek near Stinson Beach reached maximum and minimum values in February and September respectively The exponential decline in creek discharge was fast compared to the decline in modeled SGD however suggesting that fresh SGD and associated nutrient fluxes may play a particularly important role in coastal ecosystems in early summer when surface water discharge has nearly reached a minimum but discharge of substantial quantities of fresh groundwater is still substantial The final research chapter Nitrogen fecal indicator bacteria and coliphage attenuation and flux from a septic leach field to the coastal ocean describes a two year field study to measure the flux and attenuation of nitrogen fecal indicator bacteria and bacteriophage in groundwater adjacent to a large coastal septic system in Central California The study was carried out at Stinson Beach Park Golden Gate National Recreation Area sixteen kilometers northwest of the San Francisco Golden Gate Bridge Long term measurements of septic effluent quality and volumetric discharge to the leach field synoptic DC resistivity profiling of the saltwater freshwater interface continuous measurements of hydraulic head in the coastal aquifer and the installation and subsequent monitoring of a dense array of multi level monitoring wells adjacent to the leach field for chemical and microbiological constituents were carried out Our results indicate a nitrogen and inorganic carbon rich plume of septic effluent flowing from the leach field through the beach to the subterranean estuary or the mixing zone of fresh and saline groundwaters Attenuation of E coli and coliphage was complete within the vadose zone and the first few meters of transport Enterococci were detected throughout the well network during one sampling event during which no attenuation was observed and no attenuation of total nitrogen was observed along the flowpath during the experiment Median estimates of total nitrogen fluxing toward the ocean downgradient from the leach field ranged from 1.6 to 70.6 moles day<sup>-1</sup> depending on season and transect location Except for

Determination of Anions Thomas R. Crompton, 1996-08-05 This book offers an excellent and complete compilation of the currently employed methods of chemical analysis of anions It will help the practitioner to apply these methods quickly and reliably in his own laboratory or to develop new methods to meet his more specialized needs The tables included in the text and in the appendix allow easy reference concerning the parameters to be adopted when following a defined procedure for many types of samples

Dahmen, 1986-08-01 Electroanalysis as a representative of the wet chemical methods has many advantages such as selectivity and sensitivity notwithstanding its inexpensive equipment ample choice of possibilities and direct accessibility especially to electronic and hence automatic control even at distance automated data treatment and simple insertion if desirable into a process regulation loop There may be circumstances in which an electroanalytical method as a consequence of the additional chemicals required has disadvantages in comparison with instrumental techniques of analysis however the above mentioned advantages often make electroanalysis the preferred approach for chemical control in industrial and environmental studies This book provides the reader with a full understanding of what electroanalysis can do in these fields It presents on the one hand a systematic treatment of the subject and its commonly used techniques on a more explanatory basis and on the other it illustrates the practical applications of these techniques in chemical control in industry health and environment As such control today requires the increasing introduction of automation and computerization electroanalysis with its direct input and or output of electrical signals often has advantages over other techniques especially because recent progress in electronics and computerization have greatly stimulated new developments in the electroanalysis techniques themselves Part A looks systematically at electroanalysis while more attention is paid in Part B to electroanalysis in non aqueous media in view of its growing importance The subject is rounded off in Part C by some insight into and examples of applications to automated chemical control Indian Journal of Environmental Protection ,1990 Forest Snow and Landscape Research ,2006 Studies on the Aerobic
