F, in France in the Flash Ranging Service (Classic Reprint)* Edward Alva Trueblood,2015-07-12 Excerpt from Observations of an American Soldier During His Service With the A E F in France in the Flash Ranging Service When the sun arose on the 22nd of June 1918 three great transports were lying out in the stream of New York harbor They were filled with American soldiers for duties overseas They were well camouflaged and well convoyed The previous afternoon they had pulled away from a Jersey City pier where they had taken on their human cargoes and they were undoubtedly under sealed orders They had slipped away quietly from the piers without attracting undue attention and while they moved to the location where they anchored for the night not a soldier s uniform could have been detected from shore even after the most scrutinizing search with the best binoculars obtainable The departure was made without a word of warning and not a fond good bye It was accomplished with a methodical silence that called for admiration It is the way Uncle Sam does things during war times Just before 9 o clock on that beautiful June morning simultaneously but without communicating with each other each of those transports began to weigh anchor and except for the click click click of the machinery all was silent Precisely at 9 05 without the blast of a whistle the sound of a gong or the hoisting of a signal flag on the mast but like so many automatic machines these vessels turned their prows to the sea and began their long voyage About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes
