Arguments for Raising the Minimum Age of Criminal Responsibility Chris Cunneen, 2022 This paper provides arguments for raising the minimum age of criminal responsibility MACR Nationally the minimum age is 10 years old Some Australian states set the MACR at 10 years in the mid to late 1970s Queensland 1976 NSW 1977 and South Australia 1979 However only since the early 2000s has there been a uniform approach to the MACR in all Australian jurisdictions The paper provides a number of reasons for raising the age international comparisons the protection of children's rights the limited ability of the common law doctrine of doli incapax to protect young children child developmental arguments and issues of mental illness and cognitive impairment the over representation of children in out of home care among young children in the juvenile justice system criminological arguments relating to the failure of an approach that relies on criminalisation and imprisonment and the views of juvenile justice practitioners In addition this paper argues that a low MACR adversely affects Indigenous children who comprise the majority of children under the age of 14 years who come before youth courts in Australia and are sentenced to either youth detention or a community based sanction

The Age of Criminal Responsibility Australian Institute of Criminology, 2005 Since the year 2000 some jurisdictions have revised their legislation confirming a trend over the last 20 years to uniformity in age limits for criminal responsibility This bulletin includes a table which sets out for each Australian jurisdiction the age up to which a child cannot be charged with a criminal offence the age range within which children are considered doli incapax or incapable of committing crime and the maximum age for appearance in a children's juvenile or youth court In the Australian Capital Territory the Criminal Code 2002 Div 2 3 1 now deals with the criminal responsibility of children From 1 July 2005 in Victoria the age jurisdiction of the criminal division of the Children's Court has increased from 17 to 18 years In Queensland for the purposes of the Juvenile Justice Act 1992 a child is a person who has not turned 17 years Recent Australian reviews have discussed amending the doli incapax presumption including reversing the onus of proof and changing its application to ages twelve and under
