Online Beyond Fear Freedom Teachings Journal:

Teaching the Middle Ages through Modern Games Robert Houghton, 2022-10-24 Games can act as invaluable tools for the teaching of the Middle Ages The learning potential of physical and digital games is increasingly undeniable at every level of historical study These games can provide a foundation of information through their stories and worlds They can foster understanding of complex systems through their mechanics and rules Their very nature requires the player to learn to progress The educational power of games is particularly potent within the study of the Middle Ages These games act as the first or most substantial introduction to the period for many students and can strongly influence their understanding of the era Within the classroom they can be deployed to introduce new and alien themes to students typically unfamiliar with the subject matter swiftly and effectively They can foster an interest in and understanding of the medieval world through various innovative means and hence act as a key educational tool This volume presents a series of essays addressing the practical use of games of all varieties as teaching tools within Medieval Studies and related fields In doing so it provides examples of the use of games at pre university undergraduate and postgraduate levels of study and considers the application of commercial games development of bespoke historical games use of game design as a learning process and use of games outside the classroom As such the book is a flexible and diverse pedagogical resource and its methods may be readily adapted to the teaching of different medieval themes or other periods of history

Configuring the Networked Self Julie E. Cohen, 2012-01-24 The legal and technical rules governing flows of information are out of balance argues Julie E Cohen in this original analysis of information law and policy Flows of cultural and technical information are overly restricted while flows of personal information often are not restricted at all The author investigates the institutional forces shaping the emerging information society and the contradictions between those forces and the ways that people use information and information technologies in their everyday lives She then proposes legal principles to ensure that people have ample room for cultural and material participation as well as greater control over the boundary conditions that govern flows of information to from and about them

Teaching History for the Contemporary World Adele Nye, Jennifer Clark, 2021-04-17 This book brings together history educators from Australia and around the world to tell their own personal stories and how they approach teaching history in the context of contemporary tensions in the classroom It encourages historians to think actively about how history in the classroom can play a role in helping students to make sense of their world and to act honourably within it The contributors come from diverse backgrounds and include experienced history educators and early career academics They showcase both a mix of approaches and democratize and decolonize the academy The book blends theory and practice It reflects on what is happening in the classroom and supports the discipline to understanding itself better to improve upon its practices and to engage in academic discussion about the responsibility of teaching in the contemporary world
