Liquid Ring Vacuum Pumps with Magnetic Drive

For details, see the glossary, previous magnetic data

The P44594-2 BM41 diagnostic-dilute polymer system is based on the dispersible P44594 BM41 carrier. It is capable of achieving dilution ratios of 1:25 to 1:1500 with 100 volumes of 30 ml test sites. Non-contact droplet dispensing is authorized by using a permanent imaging system.

Safe handling of highly toxic liquids and gases

The group's other working space is hermetically sealed from atmospheric conditions, eliminating any possibility of leakage. This seal is essential for demanding applications, such as processes that are required to meet the most stringent standards on environmental compatibility. Thus, in this hermetically sealed working space, the group can also work under hazardous and explosive environmental conditions. All ESD certifications are available.

Additional wear and tear maintenance costs

PARSON 2.8M3 pumps are sealed partly through the use of static seals which, unlike conventional rotating-seal designs, are almost wear-free. The pump's operating fluid ensures optimum lubrication and cooling of the friction bearings and magnetic coupling, eliminating the need for grease lubrication.

In many applications, the magnetic coupling often is a necessary alternative to double-acting mechanical seals.

Thanks to the well-proven hydrostatic and a reliable magnetic drive, the HAGEN 2000A1 series is a well-engineered, dependable and efficient pump for a wide range of demanding applications.
