However, because the data were gathered by telephone, no attempt was made to control for gender, ethnicity, or education level. In addition, no physical examinations were conducted. Thus, the results of this study are not generalizable to the entire U.S. population. However, the results do suggest that 40% of women report symptoms of depression and anxiety, and 10% report symptoms of panic and phobia. These percentages are similar to those reported by women in the general population.
