then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever had your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch, then next time you've had a mini meal prepped. Generally, though, meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days' worth of food at a time. Think of it like keeping your lunches for the week all at once instead of keeping your lunch hours running. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping isn't necessarily a waste and reduces time to the outside world, whether the plan is a diet or a budget. When keeping your regular day out of the question, meal planning will allow you to eat healthy meals without having to do it every day. Meal planning isn't for everyone. It is good for those who value convenience and for more than one person. With meal prepping, you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with food, meal prepping isn't for you. If having nutritious food is what you're maximizing, your time and budget is more valuable than not doing something different every day. Meal planning is usually a good idea. I've generally not seen a meal prep that is a bad idea or maybe one other person doing a whole meal. Meal planning for a whole family would be quite difficult, but the more people involved, the more it would be a challenge. A food item stored in the refrigerator for a long time is a slow decline in quality. In addition to the way food is packed, the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meals. The length of time is acceptable, but the texture and flavor will be affected by the eater. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines, but the FDA and then evaluate them against your own preferences. In general, I don't like to eat more than a few days' worth of food, but I find that by that fifth day, the food is usually not as good.
