The heart has four chambers: two atria and two ventricles.

- Right side → oxygenated blood from the lungs.
- Left side → deoxygenated blood from the body.

The heart receives oxygenated blood from the lungs and deoxygenated blood from the body. It pumps oxygenated blood to the body and deoxygenated blood back to the lungs.

The heart also has valves that ensure the unidirectional flow of blood, preventing backflow & maintaining efficient circulation.
