

IMPORTANT NOTICE

These instructions are for the use of qualified individuals specially trained and experienced in installation of this type equipment and related system components.

Installation and service personnel are required by some states to be licensed. Persons not qualified shall not install this equipment nor interpret these instructions.

WARNING

IMPROPER INSTALLATION MAY DAMAGE EQUIPMENT, CAN CREATE A HAZARD AND WILL VOID THE WARRANTY.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The size of recreational vehicle air conditioners is generally limited to about 13,500 BTUH (approximately one ton) of cooling.

This is due to the limited electrical power normally available in most trailer parks and/or economic limitations on the use of generators with enough capacity to handle large air conditioners.

If more than 1 ton of cooling is desired, then the use of two air conditioners is recommended.

The ability of the air conditioner to maintain the desired inside temperature depends on the heat gain of the recreational vehicle.

The size of the vehicle, amount of window area, amount of insulation, direct exposure to the sun, outside temperature and the number of people in the recreational vehicle may increase the heat gain to such an extent that the capacity of the air conditioner is exceeded.

As a general rule, air entering the air conditioner will be cooled about 15 to 20 degrees, depending on the outside temperature and humidity conditions.

For example, if the air entering the return air grilles in the air conditioner is 80° F., the air leaving the discharge grilles in the air conditioner will be 60° to 65° F.

As long as this temperature difference is being maintained between the return air and discharge air, the air conditioner is operating at its capacity. If desired inside temperature (normally 80° F.) cannot be maintained, then the heat gain of the R.V. is too great for the capacity of the air conditioner.

Parking the vehicle in a shaded area, keeping windows and doors shut and avoiding the use of heat producing appliances in the vehicle will help to reduce the heat gain. Where possible, the addition of insulation and tinted glass (especially in uninsulated vans) should be considered.

NOTE

The words "Shall" or "Must" indicate a requirement which is essential to satisfactory and safe product performance.

The words "Should" or "May" indicate a recommendation or advice which is not essential and not required but which may be useful or helpful.

SECTION II SELECTING A LOCATION

Your Coleman RV air conditioning unit has been designed for use primarily in recreational vehicles. One or two units may be installed on the RV's roof, depending on the size and construction of the vehicle and the expected outdoor temperatures.

In general, roof mount air conditioners are installed at existing roof vent locations. When existing vents are used, they should be completely removed, with all other holes in the roof's skin thoroughly sealed before installation of the air conditioning unit is performed.

If there are no roof vents present and the installation is taking place on a TRAVEL TRAILER or MINI-HOME, a location should be selected that is near the door slightly forward of center. See Figure 1. For MOTOR HOME applications, a single unit or the forward of two units should be mounted within 9 feet of the driver's compartment. See Figure 2. When the air conditioner is installed on a VAN it should be located in the center of the roof, halfway between the front and rear of the vehicle, see Figure 3.

For application on Trucks with Campers, the unit should be located between 4 and 5 feet from the rear of the camper in order that the maximum cooling effect of the air conditioner is achieved.
