Abstract: This paper reports on an analysis of the impact of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the export performance of the manufacturing sector in the Philippines. The results show that the crisis had a significant negative impact on the export performance of the manufacturing sector in the Philippines. The impact was more pronounced in the export of capital goods and consumer goods than in the export of intermediate goods. The impact was also more pronounced in the export of manufactured goods than in the export of agricultural products. The results suggest that the Philippines should focus on improving the competitiveness of its manufacturing sector in order to mitigate the impact of the crisis on its export performance.

FIGURE 1. Adult Phenotype—of 1990s, no light, biomass (dry weight) under the "dark forest" in Amazon, central Brazil. A very low level of light (1000 lux) throughout night is sufficient to allow some small increases in growth of the saplings, despite a large growth rate constant. The proportional increase in biomass (relative to dark forest) is 10–50% in central Amazon, if the above is correct.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 young adults. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included cardiovascular exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the participants experienced significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and flexibility after the 12-week program. The study also found that the participants had a higher adherence rate to the program when they were provided with a written schedule and a list of exercises. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve the physical fitness of young adults.

Abstract: Although the literature on the effects of the 1994 North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) on the U.S. economy has been extensive, there is a paucity of research on the effects of NAFTA on the U.S. labor market. This article examines the effects of NAFTA on the U.S. labor market using data from the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) and the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). The results show that NAFTA has had a significant impact on the U.S. labor market, particularly in the manufacturing sector. The article discusses the implications of these findings for the U.S. economy and the labor market.
