An assessment of industrial employment skill gaps among university graduates Mirza, Faisal Mehmood, Jaffri, Atif Ali, Hashmi, Muhammad Saim, 2014-04-21 The objective of this study is to examine different assessments of employers and students about job skills leading to differences defined as skill employability and perception gaps based on surveys of 100 industrial employers and 151 final year students from 6 universities and postgraduate colleges in the Gujrat Sialkot Gujranwala industrial cluster. Factor analysis grouped 24 specific skills into the three interpretable categories communication and business specific skills, core employability skills and professional skills. The results suggest gaps in all three respects for each of the skill categories. Employers were least satisfied with the professional skills of new employees compared to their scores on the importance of these skills. Students also scored their own professional skills lower than the importance of these skills in the job market. Smaller but similar differences arise for the other skill categories. Students generally gave higher nominal scores to the importance of all skills than were given by employers. When disaggregated by discipline students in more technical fields engineering, computer science and IT which are supposed to possess high level of technical skills claim a shortage of these skills whereas students from economics, commerce and business administration indicated they were neither sound in professional skills nor the softer skills. Close coordination among all stakeholders through internship programs for students development and timely revision of market oriented curricula and special skill enhancement training programs are recommended steps to enhance productive youth employment in Pakistan
