Pagan Ireland (Classic Reprint) Eleanor Hull, 2015-07-08 Excerpt from Pagan Ireland There is an old tale told in Ireland of a loveable and bright and handsome youth named Donn bo who was the best singer of songs of idleness and the best teller of King stories in the world He could tell a tale of each king who reigned at Tara from the Tale of the Destruction of Dind Righ when Cobthach Coelbreg was killed down to the kings who reigned in his own time One night before a battle the warriors said Make minstrelsy for us O Donn bo But Donn bo said No word at all will come on my lips to night therefore for this night let the King buffoon of Ireland amuse you But to morrow at this hour in whatever place they and I shall be I will make minstrelsy for the fighting men For the warriors had said that unless Donn bo went with them on that hosting not one of them would go On the evening of the morrow Donn bo lay dead his fair young body stretched across the body of the King of Erin for he had died in defending his chief But his head had rolled away and lay amongst a wisp of growing rushes by the water side At the feasting of the army on that night a warrior said Where is Donn bo that he may make minstrelsy for us and tell us the King stories of Erin About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing which these works are linked emotionally and thematically to early Gaelic literature and the tradition of the mythic pagan playboy Oisín or Úisneach. As the last great pagan hero of Ireland Oisín emerges as an archetype for the many playboys and paycocks of Irish comedy. Oisín was the antithesis of St Patrick the first great Christian saint of Ireland who condemning pleasure and threatening eternal damnation came to represent all authority. The bearers of this dark and wild Celtic tradition which Synge and O'Casey associated with a daimonic or barbarous impulse laugh irreverently at their own creations. This laughter the laughter of the culture's mythmakers brings with it emotional relief comic catharsis.
