LGBTQ+ Family-Making, Reproductive Ethics, and the (Re)Shaping of Family Values Amanda Roth, 2025-12-29 This book examines the ethical issues surrounding assisted reproductive technologies and queer family making practices By focusing on LGBTQ people and experiences in relation to procreative ethics this book challenges dominant approaches and views in philosophical bioethics In Part 1 of this book the author introduces the idea of queer epistemic privilege regarding issues of family and reproduction and applies this notion to the bioethical debates around donor conception In Part 2 the author problematizes the typical philosophical conception of the debate over donor anonymity by centering queer perspectives and experiences Drawing on social science research she makes the case for queer difference in how donor conception is practiced and then employs this notion to show why the dominant ethical views opposing donor anonymity fail Whereas most scholars view this issue as an issue of pure procreative parental ethics this book instead employs a queer perspective to draw out an alternative framing of the conflict one between procreative parental ethics and the moral responsibility to resist unjust social systems and norms e g bionormativity This broader framing offers a limited defense of some uses of anonymous donor gametes that is tied directly to the nature of ongoing LGBTQ family marginalization Finally in Part 3 the author draws attention to two aspects of donor conception that are common in the queer community but receive virtually no attention in the bioethical literature known donation and donor sibling contact relationships and shows what we miss philosophically when these queer practices are erased from the bioethical discussions around donor conception LGBTQ Family Making Reproductive Ethics and the Re Shaping of Family Values is an essential resource for researchers or advanced students working in Moral Philosophy especially Reproductive Ethics Feminist Philosophy and LGBTQ Philosophy Bioethics and Gender Sexuality and Women s Studies

Philosophy and Child Poverty Nicolás Brando, Gottfried Schweiger, 2019-09-12 This book offers a broad and diverse reflection of the ways in which child poverty could be conceptualised and the ways in which it is intertwined with childhood as a specific social condition Furthermore the responsibilities towards children and the possible mechanisms required for dealing with this condition will be analysed and clarified This is the first volume on philosophy and child poverty Despite the increasing number of publications on poverty the particular phenomenon of poverty during childhood has not received much philosophical attention This is surprising given the severity and depth of child poverty around the globe This volume brings together various philosophical approaches and how they understand and tackle child poverty This is an important addition to the philosophical literature which is also of wider interest to scholars working in the social sciences and with an interest in child poverty

Regulating Reproductive Donation Susan Golombok, Rosamund Scott, John B. Appleby, Martin Richards, Stephen Wilkinson, 2016-04-01 The emergence of new empirical evidence and ethical debate about families created by assisted reproduction has called into question the current regulatory frameworks that govern reproductive donation in many countries In this multidisciplinary book social scientists ethicists and lawyers offer fresh perspectives on the current challenges facing the regulation of reproductive donation and suggest possible ways forward. They address questions such as what might people want to know about the circumstances of their conception? Should we limit the number of children donors can produce? Is it wrong to pay donors or to reward them with cut price fertility treatments? Is overseas surrogacy exploitative of women from poor communities? Combining the latest empirical research with analysis of ethics policy and legislation, the book focuses on the regulation of gamete and embryo donation and surrogacy at a time when more people are considering assisted reproduction and when new techniques and policies are underway.

The Family: A Liberal Defence D. Archard, 2010-12-21. An account of the nature and value of the family within a liberal society. It defines family and assesses the right to have a family, whether the family promotes injustice and what future there is for the family in the face of significant changes.

Who is Worthy of Protection? Meghana Nayak, 2015. A surprisingly understudied topic in international relations is gender based asylum. Gender based asylum offers protection from deportation for migrants who have suffered gender violence and persecution in their home countries. Countries are increasingly acknowledging that even though international refugee law does not include gender as a category of persecution, gender violence can threaten people's lives and requires attention. But Meghana Nayak argues that it matters not just that but how we respond to gender violence and persecution. Asylum advocates and the US government have created frames or ideas about how to understand different types of gender violence and who counts as victims. These frames are useful in increasing gender based asylum grants. But the United States is negotiating the tension between the protection and the restriction of non-citizens claiming to offer safe haven to persecuted people at the same time that it aims to control borders. Thus the frames construct which migrants are worthy of protection. The effects of the asylum frames are two-fold. First, they leave out or distort the stories and experiences of asylum seekers who do not fit preconceived narratives of good victims. Second, the frames reflect but also serve as an entry point to deepen, strengthen and shape the US position of power relative to other countries, international organizations and immigrant communities. Who Is Worthy of Protection explores the politics of gender based asylum through a comparative examination of US asylum policy and cases regarding domestic violence female circumcision rape trafficking coercive sterilization and abortion and persecution based on sexual and gender identity Minnesota Law Review, 2011

Permissible Progeny? Sarah Hannan, Samantha Brennan, Richard Vernon, 2015 This volume contributes to the growing literature on the morality of procreation and parenting About half of the chapters take up questions about the morality of bringing children into existence The other half of the volume considers moral and political questions about adoption and parenting This collection builds on existing literature by advancing novel perspectives on existing debates It also raises new issues deserving of our attention Procreation, Parenthood, and Educational Rights Jaime Ahlberg, Michael

Cholbi, 2017 This book explores important issues at the nexus of two burgeoning areas within moral and social philosophy procreative ethics and parental rights It aims to bring expert practitioners from these literatures into fruitful and innovative dialogue around questions at the intersection of procreation and parenthood A distinguishing feature is that several of its chapters address these issues by drawing on philosophical work in the realm of education one of the most controversial areas in the ethics of parenthood This book represents a distinctive synthesis of topics and literatures likely to appeal to scholars and advanced students working across a wide range of disciplines Children David Archard, 2015 Creating and

Raising Humans Jason T. Marsh, 2012 It used to be widely held that procreation does not need a justification that its moral permissibility is simply obvious But things are different now And the change is largely due to a number of arguments from Benatar Shiffrin and Velleman In response to this background my dissertation offers the beginnings of the first systematic defense of procreation one that consists in four articles Along the way it draws some implications for parenting for bioethics for normative ethics and for political philosophy Article one presents a novel argument that our lives may be much more valuable than we think one that stems from an overlooked connection between lotteries value and the non identity problem Article two explores the relationship between happiness research and procreation and blocks an argument that our lives are much worse than we think not good enough to start Article three argues that certain leftover problems in our attempt to justify procreation create a new argument for the doctrine of procreative beneficence and reveal that strict deontologists should probably become moderate deontologists at least if they wish to justify creating persons Article four formulates a new challenge for moral and political philosophy about the extent to which parents may transmit rejecting and potentially harmful attitudes to their sexual minority children Here I show that the way in which parents reason about rejection has bearing on whether they should create Procreative Justice Erik Magnusson, 2025-08 Parenting Begins Before Conception

Carista Luminare-Rosen, 2000-05 Prospective parents learn how they can lay the foundations for a healthy happy family life even before their children are conceived This guide shows parents how they can optimize children s physical emotional and spiritual health Illustrations Conceiving Contemporary Parenthood Zeynep B. Grtin, Charlotte Faircloth, 2020-12-18 With the global expansion of reproductive technologies there are ever more ways to create a family and more family types than ever before This book explores the experiences of those persons whether single in a couple or part of collective co parenting arrangements whether hetero or homosexual whether cis or transgender who are creating what has been termed new family forms with reproductive assistance Drawing on qualitative research from around the world the book is particularly anchored in two bodies of social science scholarship sociological and anthropological inquiries into the cultural impact of reproductive technologies on the one hand and parenting culture studies on the other It seeks to create fertile conversations between these scholarships highlighting the intersections in the ways we think about conceiving and caring for children in today s reproductive landscape Focusing specifically on persons whose reproductive journeys do not conform to dominant scripts the book traces the many ways in which intentions expectations and technological developments contribute to changing and enduring conceptions of good parenthood in the twenty first century Taking a holistic perspective the book presents deep insights into the experiences not only of intending parents but also of donors surrogates medical professionals and activists The collection will be of interest to an international readership of scholars of gender reproduction parenting and family life The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Anthropology Medicine

Pathways and Barriers to Parenthood Orit Taubman - Ben-Ari,2019-09-25 This volume explores the transition to parenthood from a holistic developmental approach relating to barriers such as fertility problems and traumatic childbirth as well as pathways such as positive experiences of pregnancy and childbirth It presents an extended process beginning with infertility issues continuing with subjects pertaining to decisions regarding parenthood pregnancy and birth and ending with the early stages of parenthood from a positive psychology perspective The volume draws on theories of resilience meaning terror management and attachment and considers psychological sociological legal policy medical and therapy issues It relates to the developmental needs of individuals and couples as well as to the role played by family society and the media offering a comprehensive in depth evaluation of the latest topics
