I was excited because there were faint handprints all over that fence. "I think that day" we were going to paint the fence. After many years, don't you think it was time to get rid of them, we bought all the supplies needed. For painting the fence, we used a roller, a paint brush, and a paint tray. But as I began working, my parents prodded me on the hand work I was doing. I wanted to "paint around the handprints" but my dad said "paint around the handprints". When we started having a paint war, My mother came and told us to stop. "I think that mom" was right. But we have to clean up, so why do we put the paint tray down and continue the paint down the fence?
