AD COMMUNICATIONS FOR THE SOCIETY OF HUMAN RESOURCE

Owner's Manual

Please give me 10 minutes this morning to go over my notes and answer your questions.

These differences in the degree of between- and within-individual variability provide some evidence concerning their relative fitness, genetic diversity and environmental, life history and social variables, and in turn, the degree of the impact human activities have had on their distribution, reproduction and persistence. These predictions provide some evidence that human use and removal impacts these ecological systems through a range of direct and indirect processes that are often subtle and long-term, and can have both positive and negative effects on these species. These predictions also provide some evidence that some species are more vulnerable to human impacts than others. These predictions are intended to facilitate the development of management plans that will reduce the probability of extinction of these species in the future.
