The Meanings of Things I. Hodder, 2013-11-12 This unique and fascinating book concentrates on the varying roles and functions that material culture may play in almost all aspects of the social fabric of a given culture The contributors from Africa Australia and Papua New Guinea India South America the USA and both Eastern and Western Europe provide a rich variety of views and experience in a worldwide perspective Several of the authors focus on essential points of principle and methodology that must be carefully considered before any particular approach to material culture is adopted One of the many fundamental questions posed in the book is whether or not all material culture is equivalent to documents which can be read and interpreted by the outside observer If it is what is the nature of the messages or meanings conveyed in this way The book also questions the extent to which acceptance and subsequent diffusion of a religious belief or symbol may be qualified by the status of the individuals concerned in transmitting the innovation as well as by the stratification of the society involved Several authors deal with works of art and the most effective means of reaching an understanding of their past significance In some chapters semiotics is seen as the most appropriate technique to apply to the decoding of the assumed rules and grammars of material culture expression

Technological Choices and Material Meanings in Early and Middle Bronze Age Hungary Attila Kreiter, 2007 This study assesses patterns in technological choices for key cultural groups in Bronze Age Hungary through macroscopic and petrological analyses of ceramic assemblages with a focus on understudied categories such as storage vessels Technological style results in a characteristic way of making pottery through communication of values and beliefs through the generations If technological difference can be identified and is seen as distinctive to a specific cultural group then it follows that by comparing technological traditions it may be possible to distinguish between the different social dynamics of contemporary societies Similarities allow us to assess the nature of social relations between communities This may call into question how traditional studies have constructed typologically defined cultural groups and provide a less fragmented picture of the Bronze Age of Hungary Thus this research is not a methodological study of provenancing ceramics but tries to answer specific archaeological questions through scientific methods

Current Approaches to Tells in the Prehistoric Old World Antonio Blanco-González, Tobias L. Kienlin, 2020-11-30 Deeply stratified settlements are a distinctive site type featuring prominently in diverse later prehistoric landscapes of the Old World Their massive materiality has attracted the curiosity of lay people and archaeologists alike Nowadays a wide variety of archaeological projects are tracking the lifestyles and social practices that led to the building up of such superimposed artificial hills However prehistoric tell dwelling communities are too often approached from narrow local perspectives or discussed within strict time and culture specific debates There is a great potential to learn from such ubiquitous archaeological manifestations as the physical outcome of cross cutting dynamics and comparable underlying forces irrespective of time and space This volume tackles tells and tell like sites as a transversal phenomenon whose commonalities and divergences are poorly understood yet may benefit from cross cultural comparison Thus the book intends to assemble a representative range of ongoing theory and science based fieldwork projects targeting this kind of sites With the aim of encompassing a variety of social and material dynamics the volume's scope is diachronic from the Earliest Neolithic up to the Iron Age and covers a very large region from Iberia in Western Europe to Syria in the Middle East The core of the volume comprises a selection of the most remarkable contributions to the session with a similar title celebrated in the European Association of Archaeologists Annual Meeting held at Barcelona in 2018 In addition the book includes invited chapters to round out underrepresented areas and periods in the EAA session with relevant research programmes in the Old World To accomplish such a cross cultural course the book takes a case based approach with contributions disparate both in their theoretical foundations from household archaeology social agency and formation theory and their research strategies including geophysical survey microarchaeology and high resolution excavation and dating examining two Royal Navy ships one off the Argentinean coast and one off the Southeast Australian coast The author goes beyond a descriptive analysis of wrecks by treating them and their cargoes as embodiments of 18th century social relations The book challenges traditional approaches providing a perspective that emphasises the richness diversity and complexity of British action Journal of Sung-Yuan Studies ,1992 Economics and Social Change in Anglo-Saxon Kent, AD 400-900 Stuart Brookes,2007 This book examines archaeological and historical evidence for the socio economic organization of the kingdom of East Kent England as a territorial and social system during the Early to Middle Anglo Saxon period AD 400 900 Explicit archaeological and theoretical frameworks are considered to propose a hierarchical model of the spatial organization of communities as a way of providing a micro economic case study of state formation In addition to other classical economic and geographical analyses applied the distributional approach examines the frequency or quantity of commodities with respect to units of economic consumption such as individuals households and communities By examining the saturation levels of community consumption as represented in burial assemblages a hierarchical model of value regimes underlying exchange sub systems is suggested Taken in combination with an analysis of the geographical organisation of settlement the author argues a thesis on the way regional space was socially and spatially constructed in ways that restricted and monopolised allocative and authoritative resources Correlations between spatially distributed phenomena and features of the physical environment are assessed in order to consider the social dynamic in land holding underlying the territorial and spatially definable conditions of reproduction An assessment is made of the importance of restrictions on the movement of people in social formation by analysing the relationships between routes of communication the mortuary landscape and the visual experience of movement Finally consideration of these phenomena with respect to changing exchange systems provides models of early medieval state formation Choice ,1989
